Comment on Contemporary Topics of Interest to Graduates of Brown

President Faunce

ALL Brown alumni will rejoice to know that President Faunce is in far better health than a year ago and that indeed to all outward appearances, at least, he is in the full possession of his old-time vigor and energy. He must, as a matter of fact, conserve his strength, but he looked well and seemed well at Commencement time and performed the strenuous duties devolving upon him at the close of the academic year with his accustomed grace and ease.

It is a source of constant wonder to us that he is forever equal to the demands made upon him for effective public addresses. We wonder if anywhere in America there is a college executive so extraordinarily talented in this regard. It makes little difference what the occasion is that calls out his orderly and eloquent speech. We heard him, for example, at the graduating exercises of the Mary C. Wheeler School, where he readily adapted himself to an audience composed largely of young women and girls. He was the chief Commencement speaker at Wheaton College on June 21, where his hearers for the most part were of the feminine persuasion. He addressed the Brown Seniors on Class Day with his accustomed suavity, following a baccalaureate sermon of marked power on Sunday. He went through the usual Presidential part of the program at the church on Commencement Day and made a graceful speech at the Sayles Hall exercises in the afternoon.

Dr. Faunce has now gone, as is his long custom, to Mohonk Lake, New York, for the summer. May the beauty of this mountain region sink deep into his heart and mind, and may he return to the campus yet further invigorated in the autumn.

More Land for Brown

AN important acquisition of land has been made by the University south of George street, just opposite St. Stephen's Church. It consists of eleven small parcels which in the aggregate form an invaluable addition to our academic holdings. A number of friends of the college secured the land some time ago when it was thought that it might be used as a site for the new gymnasium, but the decision was reached to erect the building on Elmgrove avenue, adjacent to Aldrich Field. These friends have now deeded the land to the University. It is not a gift, though we understand that the terms of the transfer were generous.

The land fronts on George, Benevolent, Charles Field and Thayer streets. Adjoining lots are needed to piece it out into a symmetrical whole, but as it stands it represents one of the most important real-estate additions in many years. In a sense it links up the main campus with the University playground on Charles Field, Thayer and Power streets, which in turn is close to land owned by the University on the east side of Thayer street and north of Power and to the new tennis courts, also east of Thayer and south of Power.

Thus the University steadily expands in every direction. These several acquisitions carry the campus far to the south and southeast, while on the east the farthest outpost on Manning street is the President's house, which faces on Hope street. At the northeast is the extensive athletic development in the Elmgrove avenue neighborhood, which includes the Brown stadium, the new gymnasium (now well on toward completion), and Aldrich Field. At the north, although Andrews Field is no longer a University possession, and has been cut up into house lots, we have the growing campus of the Women's College. This extends from Meeting street, where the original building (Pembroke Hall) fronts, to Cushing and Brown streets, and well toward Thayer street also. On the west the University has acquired within the last few years the land between the D K E house and the Providence Athenaeum on College Hill; and we suppose that year by year these various holdings will in the natural course of events be increased by others as notable.

When the present writer was an undergraduate the campus was restricted within the quadrangle formed by Prospect, Waterman, Thayer and George streets. Considerably later the Ladd Observatory was built on Doyle avenue at a height of 210 feet above the sea. This structure, by the way, still marks our northerly boundary; we forgot to include it in the list of University possessions a moment ago. So far as we recall, the only college buildings in our time outside the quadrangle referred to were the President's Mansion at the head of College street (home of the stately President Robinson), and the Library, now the home of the Department of Economics.

Simple Days

WHAT simple days those were, to be sure. All intercollegiate baseball games and many of the football games were played on the "back campus," afterward named Lincoln Field. It was extremely convenient to leave one's room in the Old Front Row five minutes before the game began, carry a comfortable window-seat cushion to the grandstand, and return at the end of the game without the necessity of patronizing a trolley, a cab or a motor car. As a matter of fact there were no motor cars in those days and even the cable line up College Hill, which antedated the present East Side trolley lines, was not opened to service until our Senior year.

In those days, (we speak now of the period ending in 1890), the college patronized a private gymnasium on Aborn street. We rather feel for the undergraduates of the future, who will have to go a long distance to the new gymnasium, when we recall the extended walk necessary for us to reach the dingy old gym up beyond the centre of the city's business section. The writer remembers that a considerable amount of the athletic practising in that faraway era was on the middle campus, where he himself engaged in the most desultory training possible on the tar walks between University and Sayles Hall for the track events of the annual spring field day.

After all it was a very pleasant college life that our community of less than 300 undergraduates lived, and if friends hadn't just this minute come in to call we would be tempted to tell the Alumni Monthly readers more about it.

Brown and Dartmouth

AS the result of a friendly meeting between Brown and Dartmouth athletic officials at Fairlee, near Hanover, late in June, the continuance of the annual football games between the two colleges is assured. The first Saturday in November, 1927, will witness a match in the Brown Stadium, and on the first Saturday in November, 1928, there will be a contest at Hanover.

After the game last fall at Dartmouth, rumors of disagreement were spread abroad. There was disaffection, not extraordinarily serious, on both sides, and suggestions were made that the long series between the two "ancient rivals" might come to an end with the game in Providence this year. Fortunately the Brown athletic authorities were invited to participate in a conference at Fairlee and, we presume, matters were frankly talked over there, as they should have been.

It seems childish for two institutions of the higher learning to split on athletic questions, as so often happens, when an honest threshing out of difficulties or misunderstandings would prevent. There are no doubt times when feeling runs high between colleges and cannot be resolved into friendliness by the most reasonable and amicable of conferees. But nothing of this sort existed in the relations between Dartmouth and Brown before the meeting at Fairlee.

It appears that a few of the younger Dartmouth alumni would have liked to see the Brown-Dartmouth series abandoned, but the preponderant sentiment among the alumni, athletic authorities and undergraduates, we understand, was in favor of maintaining it. It would indeed have been unfortunate to drop it. It is one of the oldest and most popular of the dual collegiate rivalries in this part of the country and should be fostered rather than given up. The two colleges are very close in the number of games won to date, Brown having had much the better of the competition at first and Dartmouth having shown her superiority on the whole in recent years, though Brown won in an unforgettable game last fall.

Here's to the Brown-Dartmouth series. May it continue uninterruptdly and with mutual sportsmanship and good will.

Brown Men on the American Museum Staff

George H. Sherwood
Brown 1898

Robert Cushman Murphy
Brown 1911

Wayne M. Faunce
Brown 1921

IN the list of promotions made in the staff of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, at the last annual meeting of the Board of Trustees, the names of three Brown graduates stood out with gratifying prominence. George H. Sherwood '98 was promoted to Director of the Museum and Executive Secretary; Robert Cushman Murphy '11 was advanced to the post of Curator of Marine Birds, and Wayne M. Faunce '21 was moved up to Assistant to the Director and Assistant Secretary of the Museum.

The American Museum is especially rich in the accomplishments of Brown men. Dr. Hermon C. Bumpus '84, formerly a professor of Comparative Anatomy at Brown and now a member of the Corporation, was Director from 1902 to 1911. Frank M. Chapman, ornithologist, explorer and Curator-in-Chief of the Department of Birds of the American Museum, was the recipient of the honorary doctor of science degree at Brown in 1913. In 1926 Brown also conferred the honorary doctor of science degree upon Roy Chapman Andrews, famous scientist and explorer and leader of the Central Asiatic Expeditions of the American Museum. Dr. Ralph Winfred Tower, for twenty-three years—or until his death on January 26 of last year—Curator of Books and Publications and of Physiology in the Museum, was a graduate of Brown, 1892. Dr. Tower instructed in biology at Brown for a year following graduation, and upon his return from study in Germany in 1894 he became Associate Professor of Physiology, continuing in this capacity until 1902. Dr. Tower was responsible for the establishment of the course in physiology in the Biology Department. Louis R. Sullivan, who entered Brown in 1915 for graduate work and as an assistant in biology under Professor Walter, joined the Museum staff in 1916 as an assistant in the Department of Anthropology, which position he held until the time of his death, April 23, 1925.

George H. Sherwood, the newly appointed Director of the Museum, has been connected with the institution for the last twenty-five years joining the scientific staff in 1902 as Assistant Curator in the Department of Invertebrate Zoology. He has subsequently held the positions of Curator of the Department of Public Education, Assistant Secretary and Assistant Treasurer, Executive Secretary, Acting Director, and now Director.

Mr. Sherwood entered Brown from the Johnston, Rhode Island, High School in 1894, choosing as his field of special endeavor the biological sciences and taking all the courses which the Department of Biology offered. His studies at Brown brought him in contact with Professors Bumpus, Mead, Gorham and Tower, all teachers of the Department of Biology, and his association with these famous scientists profoundly influenced him in the choice of his career. He tells with deep gratitude of the great assistance these men rendered in helping him to find himself and gain confidence in his own ability and works. His interest in biology became firmly cemented and what was to be a life-long and very close friendship with the late Dr. Tower established.

Working his way through college, at one time by selling books, he chanced to meet on a train Dr. Bumpus, who meanwhile had become Director of the U. S. Fish Commission at Woods Hole. Dr. Bumpus offered his former student a minor position in the laboratory at Woods Hole, the Mecca of the biologist of that day, which the young aspirant seized upon with great zeal, and for five summers —1898 to 1902—he made studies at that institution on clam cultures and the rearing of lobsters. Under the direction of Dr. Bumpus and Dr. Mead during the academic year, he continued to do graduate work at the University and to instruct in the Department of Biology. This afforded a fine opportunity for broadening his experience in biological sciences which was later to stand him in good stead in his work at the Museum.

In 1902 Dr. Bumpus, then Director of the American Museum, recommended Mr. Sherwood for a position in that institution which he accepted, becoming Assistant Curator of the Department of Invertebrate Zoology. Through a series of steady promotions in the Administrative Staff and the Department of Public Education, Mr. Sherwood has risen to the highest administrative post at the Museum, the Directorship. He still retains the post of Curator-in-Chief of Public Education, with which department he has been connected for some twenty-four years and whose work with the City schools, conceived and instituted by Dr. Bumpus, he has had the privilege of developing. Mr. Sherwood is a member of Sigma Xi, Treasurer of the New York Academy of Sciences, member of the Century Association, the Explorers Club of New York and several other scientific societies.

Robert Cushman Murphy was graduated in 1911, the first of four brothers to go to Brown. Before entering college he spent a year at the American Museum as an assistant. He also did graduate work for three years at Columbia. Subsequently he became Curator of Mammals and Birds at the Brooklyn Museum and was then promoted to the head of the Department of Natural Science, which position he held for ten years. During part of this period he was associated with the American Museum of Natural History in marine ornithological research. In 1921 he went to the American Museum as Associate Curator of Marine Birds and also served from 1924 to 1926 as Assistant Director. On January 1, 1927, he was promoted to Curator of Oceanic Birds, a richly deserved recognition of his contribution to natural science.

During Dr. Murphy's Museum career much time has been spent in field exploration, especially in the oceans of the Southern Hemisphere. His various charges included the following major expeditions: 1912-13, Sub-Antarctic Atlantic Ocean; 1915, Peninsula of Lower California; 1919 20, Coast and Islands of Peru; 1924-25, Northern Peru and Ecuador; 1926, Mediterranean Sea. In 1925 Dr. Murphy received an honorary degree of Doctor of Science from the University of San Marcos, at Lima, Peru, the oldest university in the Western Hemisphere.

His contributions to literature on oceanic zoology and oceanography have been extensive. He is the author of the well known "Bird Islands of Peru," published in 1925, in addition to numerous scientific articles of both a technical and popular nature Dr. Murphy is a Fellow of the American Geographical Society, a Fellow of the American Ornithologists Union, Vice President of the Explorers Club of New York and a mmber of the Century Association and of many of the leading scientific societies.

Wayne M. Faunce completed his preparatory schooling in the Technical High High School of Providence. entering Brown in 1917. He took his degree of Bachelor of Science in engineering in 1921 and elected to remain as an instructor at the University for four years. During this period Mr. Faunce was able to gain much practical experience in engineering and administration through his affiliation with Professors Kenerson and Hall in the Department of Engineering, assisting them in their extensive consulting and engineering practice. From 1923 to 1925 he was in charge of the mechanical engineering laboratories at Brown and of the commercial testing carried on there. In the meantime he was pursuing graduate work in geology and engineering. During the summers he had various short time engineering connections with public utilities and engineering concerns of Providence. His last commission before resigning from the University teaching staff was the installation of the equipment in the first section of the new engineering laboratory. He enlisted during the war and was stationed for a short period at the Officers' Training School of the Coast Artillery at Fort ress Monroe, Virginia, returning to Brown after the signing of the armistice.

On October 1, 1925, Mr. Faunce was appointed Assistant Secretary of the American Museum, and on January 1, 1927, was promoted to Assistant to the Director in charge of mechanical operation and of construction matters, and Assistant Secretary. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta. Sigma Xi, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the Providence Engineering Society, being elected councillor of the last named organization in 1925. He is also a member of the American Association of Museums and is Secretary-Treasurer of the Brown Engineering Association.

Strengthening the Mathematics Department

By Professor R. C. Archibald

ALTHOUGH the Department is losing Assistant Professors Ingraham and Langer to the University of Wisconsin, two recent appointments have added very greatly to its strength. Indeed never before has Brown been so well equipped for undergraduate and graduate instruction. Jacob David Tamarkin, formerly professor at the University of St. Petersburg, and during the past two years Lecturer at Dartmouth College, has been appointed an Assistant Professor; Albert Arnold Bennett, head of the department of mathematics at Lehigh University, has been appointed to a Professorship. Both of these men are very exceptional mathematicians and Professor Tamarkin, especially, is internationally known through his long series of publications.

Professor Tamarkin was born in Russia in 1888 and entered the University of St. Petersburg in 1906. He won a gold medal in 1907, his doctorate in 1910, and the degree of Master of Applied Mathematics in 1917. He was Instructor in the University of St. Petersburg, in the St. Petersburg School of Railroads, and in the Technical Institute from 1910 to 1917 when he was promoted to a Professorship. He was a Professor and Dean of the Faculty of the University of Perm 1920-22 and Professor at the St. Petersburg Naval Academy, and consultant at the St. Peters burg Optical Institute, at the Central Weather Bureau and at the Petrograd Physico-Technical Institute, 1922-25. He has published nearly forty memoirs and treatises in Russian, French, German and English; these were printed in Russia, Germany, Italy, England and the United States. He is also an associate editor of the Transactions of the American Mathematical Society, the leading research journal in this country. Furthermore, he is a musician of wide knowledge and a man of personal charm.

Professor Bennett was born in 1888 in Japan, where his father was a missionary, and came to the United States in 1902. He took his A. B. and A. M. degrees from Brown University in 1910 and the Master of Science degree in 1911. He is a member of both the Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi Societies. In 1914 he received his doctorate at Princeton University, where he was an Instructor in mathematics 1914-16. He was Adjunct Professor of mathematics at the University of Texas, 1916-18, and Associate Professor from 1921 to 1925, when he was appointed Professor and head of the department of mathematics at Lehigh University. During the war he was in 1917 commanding captain of the Coast Artillery Reserve Corps but from June. 1919-September, 1921, he was mathematics and dynamics expert of the ordnance corps. By virtue of his Introduction to Ballistics published by the Ordnance Department in 1921 and his Tables for Interior Ballistics published by the same Department in the following year, he is recognized as one of the leading ballistic experts in the country.

He is also the author of many papers in the Annals of Mathematics, of which he is an associate editor, in the American Mathematical Monthly, of which he was for one year editor in chief, and in the Texas Mathematics Teachers' Bulletin, of which he was also editor for a year.

It must be a source of deep satisfaction to all interested in Brown to learn that she has been able to attract to her faculty men of such eminence as Professors Tamarkin and Bennett.

Close of the Baseball Season

Brown won her fifth consecutive baseball game of the season by defeating Temple University of Philadelphia 7-2 at Aldrich Field on Thursday, May 26, the game having been postponed from Wednesday on account of rain. Rawlings, the Brown pitcher, held the visitors to 2 hits, while Brown batted Hochkeiser of Temple for 10 safeties. Parker made Brown's only error, while Temple made no errors at all. Wright of Brown and Hochkeiser of Temple were credited with a 2-bagger each and Heffernan of Brown with a 3-bagger. Sacrifice hits were made by Scribner, Parker, Heffernan, Gurney, Billings and Randall of Brown and Welham of Temple. Brown's hits were registered by Edes, Parker, Heffernan (2), Gurney, Billings, Wright (3) and Rawlings.

At Aldrich Field on Saturday, May 28, Brown defeated Dartmouth in their only meeting of the year on the diamond, the first scheduled game having been omitted on account of rain. The contest was marred by errors, but no less interesting to watch because of that. Brown got away to a long lead by scoring 4 runs in the first and added 2 in the fifth. With the score 6-0, it looked as if the Green were destined to a shut-out, but Billings's wildness and an attack of nerves on the part of the Brown team in the eighth gave the visitors 4 runs. The game ended with the score 6-4 in favor of Brown. Hits: Brown 7, Dartmouth 5. Errors: Brown 4, Dartmouth 7. Runs: Scribner, Edes, Heffernan, Billings (2), Randall—6; Michelini, Fusonie, Elliott, Stevens—4. Stolen bases: Stevens, Wright, Norris. Sacrifices: Schuster, Parker. Double play: Owl to Michelini. Struck out: By Billings 11, by Van Riper 2, by Harris 3. First base on balls: Off Billings 6, off Van Riper 4, off Harris 1. Wild pitch: Billings. Passed balls: Brown 3, Dartmouth 2. First base on errors: Brown 4, Dartmouth 1. Left on bases: Brown 8, Dartmouth 8. Time: 2h. 15m. Umpires: Devron and Finnell. Attendance 1500.

On Memorial Day, May 30, at Aldrich Field, Brown was beaten for a second time this season by Harvard, for whom Barbee pitched a good game. Burgess pitched the first two innings for Brown and part of the third—a strange assignment for one of the premier games of the year in view of the fact that he had been used scarcely at all during the season. His wildness led to his withdrawal in the third, Rawlings succeeding him and allowing Harvard only one hit during 6 2-3 innings. When Rawlings went in the score was 5-0 in favor of Harvard, and so it remained.

On June 4 at Providence Brown defeated Wesleyan 14-1. Billings pitched for Brown while Wesleyan tried three pitchers. Brown made 18 hits.

Brown suffered an unexpected defeat at the hands of the University of New Hampshire at Aldrich Field on Saturday, June 11. Rawlings had a poor day and New Hampshire won 5-2. Billings had previously been declared ineligible for the remainder of the season because of scholastic difficulties.

On Commencement Day, June 15, at Aldrich Field Brown held Vanderbilt University 1-0 until the 9th inning, when the visitors batted Rawings for 2 hits, which, together with 2 errors, gave Vanderbilt 4 runs and the game. Brown made 9 hits and 2 errors, Vanderbilt 7 and 2. The attendance was about 1500.

A Good Suggestion

Editor Brown Alumni Monthly:

Am returning your letter inviting my subscription for the reason that I have been a subscriber since June, 1920, and, of course, intend to continue. I enclose also one dollar and will ask you to credit it to the renewal of my subscription, which should be due about this time.

The magazine is indeed a fine one and is really a "gift" at $1.00 a year. I don't care for the new size as much as the old, but after all the important thing is the news itself, and that is excellent.

I have just one suggestion for improvement, which you might take into consideration. I would like to see you include in each edition (with changes as they become necessary) a list of the Brown Clubs, with the dates and places of their regular meetings (where that is possible) and the names and addresses of their secretaries. Such a list, corrected from time to time, would be a real benefit to those of us who do considerable traveling, and would make your fine magazine even finer.

Alan N. MacDougall '20

Washington, D. C., June 19, 1927.

(We are grateful to this alumnus for his courteous reception of our superfluous invitation to him to subscribe. We are glad we sent it, since it brings us this pleasant response. And we wish to say that since receiving it we have conferred with Alumni Secretary A. H. Gurney, who willingly undertakes to provide the desired club list, beginning next fall. This list will include meeting dates so far as practicable.—Editor).

Benefit Street

Professor B. C. Clough has this to say in the Providence Journal about Benefit street:

"You can buy ancestral portraits, as Major General Stanley did; you can build 'colonial' mansions; you can construct model villages almost overnight; but even a movie magnate could not have made Benefit street in Providence. It is hardly a mile long, but where will you find a more varied mile? There are shops, fine mansions, churches, court-houses, libraries, garages and much else, sometimes a little absurdly juxtaposed. There is old New England (the Whitman house, the quondam Golden Ball Tavern, the old State House where Rhode Island anticipated the Declaration of Independence), and there is a bit of old London; on a foggy night, in the stretch between College street and George you might swear you were in Bloomsbury. There is the Athenaeum, a trifle aloof. And perhaps aloofness is the main note of the older buildings. The motor trucks roar by, and physically Benefit street is shaken. Spiritually, however, it makes no surrender. Times have changed, but what matter? Old houses have their memories."

Brown in Baltimore

At the final meeting of the year of the Brown Club of Baltimore, held May 27 in the Gray Room of the New Hoard Hotel, the speaker was Major W. D. Tipton, commanding officer of the Air Unit of the Maryland National Guard, who took for his topic, "Modern Developments in Aeronautics." Major Tipton commented with great interest regarding the recent trans-Atlantic flight of Lindbergh, treating the subject from a technical point of view. He described minutely the equipment and apparatus used and illustrated graphically many of the principles involved in their construction and operation. He discussed, in contrast to those of European nations, the development and distribution of the present and projected schemes of air mail and passenger service in this country, showed the needs and problems of modern aviation and explained the latest achievements in the science of aerial navigation. Following the talk ,which was thoroughly enjoyed, Major Tipton answered and discussed questions asked by his hearers.

The Year's Record in Various Sports

Field and Track

Roxbury School of Cheshire, Conn., administered a severe defeat to the Brown Freshmen in a field-and-track meet at Providence, May 20. Score: 86-40.

The Holy Cross Freshmen beat the Brown Freshmen at a dual field-and-track meet in Providence, May 27. Th score was 103¼ to 31¾. Brown took only three first places.

Owing to the absence of its chief stars, Broda and Collier, at the national championships in Philadelphia Brown was nosed out by Wesleyan in the field-and-track meet of May 28 by a score of 69 to 63. The management deliberately took a chance by entering Broda and Collier in the nationals, which were won by Stanford University. Broda placed in the 440-yd. trials and Collier took second (with Wells of Dartmouth first) in the 120-yd. hurdles finals, beating out two contestants from Stanford and one from Southern California. Time: 14 8-10 sec. Wells defeated Collier by only 3 yards.

Following is the Varsity team's record for the season:

Brown 66 2-3, R. I. State 63 1 3.
Brown 67, Colby 68.
Brown 50 1-2, Bowdoin 84 1-2.
Brown 48, Columbia 87.
Brown 66, Wesleyan 69.

Following is the Freshman record for the season:

Brown '30 56, Moses Brown 61.
Brown '30 65, R. I. Fresh. 70.
Brown '30 84, St. Johns 50.
Brown '30 40, Roxbury 86.
Brown '30 31 3-4, H. Cr's 103 1-4

Lacrosse

Brown's disastrous second season at Lacrosse ended with a 14-0 beating by Dartmouth at Hanover on May 28.

The season closed without a single Brown victory. Better luck next year.

Golf

Dartmouth beat Brown at golf 6-3, May 20, at Worcester, MacKenzie and Partridge being the only Brunonian winners.

Brown and Colgate tied, 3-3, at golf on May 23 at the Agawam Hunt, Providence. MacKenzie and Partridge of Brown won their matches, the latter making the course in 73. These two players also won in doubles.

At the Rhode Island Country Club on May 25, Harvard beat Brown at golf, 4-2, but MacKenzie beat Captain Simpson of Harvard, making the course in 71. Captain Partridge of Brown could not play, having caught a cold in the pouring rain that featured the afternoon competition with Colgate two days before.

On May 27, the University of Pennsylvania beat Brown at golf in Philadelphia, 6 to 3. MacKenzie of Brown beat Acting Captain Merritt of Penn and Captain Partridge of Brown beat Henson. The Brown men who were defeated were Tully, Liese, Kenyon and McNally.

MacKenzie of Brown teamed with Francis Ouimet at the Pomonok Country Club, May 28, and beat Charles Mayo, the home club professional, and George Duncan, the British open champion in 1920, 5 and 4. MacKenzie was the star of the match.

Following is the golf record for the year:

Brown 3, New Bedford C. C. 4.
Brown 4, Holy Cross 5.
Brown 6, Amherst 0.
Brown 1, Williams 5.
Brown 5, M. I. T. 4.
Brown 1, Yale 8.
Brown 3, Wesleyan 3.
Brown 3, Dartmouth 6.
Brown 3, Colgate 3.
Brown 2, Harvard 4.
Brown 3, U. of Penn. 6.

Meets won, 1; tied, 2; lost 7.

Tennis

After an undefeated record in dual matches throughout the season, the Brown tennis team fell by the wayside at the New England Intercollegiate games late in May, Dartmouth and Williams dividing first honors.

The Brown Freshmen beat the Dartmouth Freshmen at tennis in Providence, May 20, by a score of 5 to 4. On May 27, the Brown Freshmen closed their season, beating Hope High School 6-0.

Following is the Varsity tennis record for the year:

Brown 5, Boston U. 1.
Brown 6, Boston Col. 0.
Brown 6, M. I. T. 3.
Brown 6, Bowdoin 0.
Brown 5, Dartmouth 4.
Brown 4, Middlebury 0.
Brown 5, Wesleyan 4.
Brown 7, Amherst 2.
Brown 5, Worcester Polytechnic 1.

Portrait of Dr. Bumpus

In presenting to the University a portrait of Dr. Hermon Carey Bumpus '84 at the Sayles Hall meeting on Commencement Day, Vice President Albert Davis Mead said:

Some of the old students and colleagues of Dr. Bumpus wish to present to the University his portrait to be hung in this Hall of Fame.

The young artist, Howard E. Smith, at one time teacher in our School of Design, is the "executioner." Like Leonardo, he has proved himself a master of interpretative physiognomy. Also he has established a record over all competitors, except Morpheus, by keeping Dr. Bumpus quiet for two consecutive hours without anaesthetics.

Dr. Bumpus has been actively associated with Brown for 47 years. He first cut his name upon the furniture of the University as a Freshman in 1880. Since then, as student, assistant in Zoology, Professor of Comparative Anatomy, member of the Board of Fellows, member of the Advisory and Executive Committee, Secretary of the Corporation, he has made himslf a living part of the educational and financial foundations of the present-day University.

HERMON CAREY BUMPUS
(From the portrait presented to the University at Commencement)

Meanwhile, he has made excursions from Brown into other great educational and scientific enterprises: the Marine Biological Laboratory, the Laboratory of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, the American Museum of Natural History, the University of Wisconsin, Tufts College, the Tufts Medical School, the National Red Cross Museums, the Buffalo Natural History Museum, the National Parks Museum system, the American Museum Association

Like a benign dragon, thriving on a diet of the prickly and indigestible problems which others avoid, he has emitted a breath of fire which has generated a new flame of life in every one of these institutions.

However, Mr. President—if I may paraphrase the words of my remote and classical predecessor—we are come to hang Caesar not to praise him; and so,

With our tribute of affection and esteem unspoken, we hand over his shadow to the Director of Ceremonies.

Many Classes Hold Reunions

REV. William J. Batt, veteran Congregational clergyman of Concord Junction, Mass., was the oldest alumnus present at Commencement this year. He was born Oct. 5, 1833, and was graduated in the class of 1855, of which he is the only surviving member.

Mr. Batt attended the Senior Seniors' reunion at Carr's, on Tuesday evening, but did not march in the Commencement procession.

Professor Wilfred H. Munro '70, secretary of the Senior Seniors, presided at their meeting. Mr. Batt was one of the speakers, expressing the hope that future meetings would result in the attendance of more men from a distance. Those present were: Rev. William J. Batt '55, Concord Junction, Mass.; Judge William W. Douglas '61, Providence; Dr. George B. Peck '64, Providence; George A. Bacon '67, Boston; John E. Bowen '67, Providence; Xenophon D. Tingley '68, Providence; William E. Lincoln '68, Pittsburgh, Pa.; William T. Peck, Sc. D., '70, Providence; Professor Wilfred H. Munro '70, Providence; Rev. Alfred E. Johnson '71, Providence; Arthur H. Armington '71, Providence; John B. Grinnell '73, Mystic, Conn.; Judge George T. Brown '73, Providence; Frank B. Bourne '73, Providence; Abel P. Tanner '74, New London, Conn., Rev. Charles A. Reese '75, Boston; Dr. Henry A. Whitmarsh '76, Providence, and Samuel Park '74, New London, Conn. Total 18.

Ten members of 1872 were the guests of John Carter Brown Woods at his home, 62 Prospect street. They were: Edward B. Hamlin, Joshua E. Crane, Leander M. Barber, William V. Kellen, Dr. John Henry Mason, Rev. Charles L. Newbold, Dr. Charles L. Parker, Adams P. Carroll, John L. Bevan and Mr. Woods Other living members are John D. Smith, George A. Stockwell, Francis A. Howarth and William C. Carr. The original number to receive degrees in 1872 was 50.

At the time of the semi-centennial reunion five years ago, which was also held at the home of Mr. Woods, there were 21 survivors. Since then Rev. Francis W. Bartlett, Arthur D. Dean, Andrew J. Jennings, Rev. William W. Landrum, George Washburn and Daniel D. Waterman have passed away.

Webster Knight was host, at his home in Natick, to 15 members of the class of '76. Those present were: Frederic Taber, Hon. Arthur L. Brown, Dr. Charles V. Chapin, Edward A. Greene, Charles R. Heath, Rev. Millard F. Johnson, Eugene P. King, Webster Knight, Myron C. Pease, Charles H. Poor, Dr. Arthur M. Round, Cromwell T. Schubarth, Dr. George C. Smith, Dr. Henry A. Whitmarsh, Edmund Wood.

1877

The half-century class assembled 25 members at the home of Fred H. Williams in Millis, Mass., as follows: Charles T. Aldrich, Rev. Thomas E. Bartlett, Dr. Samuel J. Bradbury, Dr. Cary C. Bradford, Dr. Frank P. Capron, Dr. H. Scudder Drake, Rev. Charles B. Elder, Dr. Charles H. Finch, Hon. Rathbone Gardner, Asa E. Goddard, Dr. Arthur G. Griffin, Thomas A. Jenckes, Hon. Clark H. Johnson, James P. Kelly, Colonel Raymond G. Mowry, Inman E. Page, Dryden W. Phelps, Dr. Edward E. Royce, Hon. Frederick Rueckert, Rev. Charles S. Scott, Rev. Frank L. Sullivan, Dr. George O. Ward, Fred H. Williams and George Worthington. Inman E. Page of Oklahoma City was the farthest comer.

A silver loving cup was presented Mr. Williams as a token of his classmates' appreciation of his "staunch loyalty to Brown and to the class of 1877."

William R. Tillinghast was host to 13 members of the class at Jim Smith's, Pawtuxet. No members have died during the year. Those present: Edward S. Adams, Frederick W. Bliss, Rev. Alva E. Carpenter, George F. Comstock, William Ely, R. Clinton Fuller, John J. Greene, Dr. A. H. Harrington, Dr. W. L. Munro, W. R. Tillinghast, Henry O. Tripp, Rev. F. H. Viets and Dr. S. A. Welch.

1880

The class of 1880 had 20 of its 45 survivors at its reunion, George F. Weston of San Diego, Calif., being the premier long-distance attendant. The reunion was at Newport and the Rhode Island Country Club in Barrington. Present: President Walter F. Angell of Providence; Zachariah Chafee of Providence, secretary; Fred W. Hammett of New York; Henry J. Boyce of Providence; James G. Lincoln of Jamestown; Charles R. Adams of Boston; B. F. Thurston of Newport; Henry Dunster of Providence; W. H. Winslow of Bristow, Va.; Truman Beckwith of Providence; Dr. William Hale, Jr., of Gloucester, Mass.; George E. Perry of Warwick Neck; Frank L. Tinkham of Taunton; Augustus L. Abbott of St. Louis; Rev. William H. Lane of Warwick; Rev. Gibbs Braislin of Haddonfield, N. J.; Rev. John L. Crane of Wakefield, Mass.; G. M. Tustin of Bloomsburg, Pa.; Dr. H. L. Koopman (Colby '80) of Providence; Prescott O. Clarke of Providence and George F. Weston.

1882

Nineteen of the 35 remaining members of the class attended the 45th reunion. Luncheon and dinner were served at the Pawtucket Golf Club.

Class officers were chosen as follows: President—Charles R. Thurston (re-elected); Secretary-Treasurer—Professor Walter B. Jacobs; Executive Committee—Elmer S. Hosmer, E. C. Bixby and Dr. William H. Tolman.

Present were: Charles L. Bartlett of Chicago, Ill.; Edward C. Bixby of Providence; William B. Bogert of Keswick, Va.; Asa R. Dilts of Amherst, Mass.; Frank A. Everett of Wellesley, Mass.; William A. Francis of Exeter, N. H.; Arthur E. Gage of Woburn, Mass.; Benjamin L. Herr of South Glen Falls, N. Y.; Professor Elmer S. Hosmer of Providence; George R. Hovey of Upper Montclair, N. J.; Professor Walter B. Jacobs of Brown; Jefferson Shiel of Philadelphia, Pa.; James H. Spencer of Colorado Springs, Col.; Charles R. Thurston of Pawtucket; Dr. William H. Tolman of Pawtucket; Charles H. S. Weaver of Providence; Harry C. Clark of Providence; Frank P. Cobb of Chicopee Falls, Mass., and Frederick L. Gamage of Pawling, N. Y.

1885

Dr. Harlan P. Abbott entertained the class at his summer home in Little Compton. Sixteen were present. Officers were chosen as follows: President—Frank Hail Brown; Vice President—Professor W. G. Everett; Secretary—Judge A. P. Sumner; Treasurer—K. C. Richmond. Other members in attendance were: C. H. Bassett, Dr. H. P. Abbott, W. C. Burwell, J. W. Freeman, E. H. Grout; Dr. C. S. Mathews, C. H. McIntyre, J. M. Pendleton, C. F. Sawyer, C. P. Seagrave, S. S. Stone, A. McC. Warren. Resolutions in honor of the late Dr. Frank L. Day '85 were adopted.

1887

Theodore Francis Green entertained the class of 1887 at his home, 14 John street, at luncheon, 24 being present. Later the class dined at the Anawan Club in Rehoboth. Present: Walter C. Bronson, Dr. Clarence A. Carr, Dr. Edmund D. Chesebro, Henry F. Colwell, Arthur I. Connell; George H. Crooker, George O. Dexter, Professor George W. Field, Isaac H. Gilhuly, Theodore Francis Green, John Henshaw, Irving C. Hicks, Albert W. Hinds, Dana C. Munro, Alfred M. Quick, Orman E. Ryther, Professor Louis F. Snow, Edward F. Thompson, William W. Wakeman, Joseph Walker, Charles L. White, Rev. Whitman L. Wood, Rev. Richard Wright, Herrick P. Young.

1892

The class held its 35th reunion in part at Ninigret Lodge, Charlestown and among the chief features of the reunion was a clambake at the Squantum Club.

1893

Twenty-two members held their 34th annual reunion at the estate of Edward B. Aldrich at Warwick Neck, where they were guests at a shore dinner. Messages were received from 15 members of the class who were unable to attend the reunion. Since graduation the class has held a reunion every year. On Wednesday morning the class were the guests of J. D. E. Jones at breakfast at the Hope Club.

1896

The class of 1896 to the number of fourteen attended a dinner at the Narragansett Hotel. Those present were Allison Stone, Judge Elmer J Rathbun, George L. Parker, Robert S. Phillips, G. Frederick Frost, Irving H. Gamwell, Carleton Hale, Rev. Clarence M. Gallup, James H. Rickard, William A. Jones, Frederick A. Jones, George C. Hinckley, Charles R. Easton and William A. McAuslan.

1897

The 30th anniversary of the class of 1897 was held at the Warwick Country Club. Present: Samuel Adams, Arthur M. Allen, Raymond C. Allen, Seril C. Armstrong, M. Hollis Arnold, James H. Arthur, Waldo R. Bartlett, Roscoe H. Belknap, Henry W. N. Bennett, M. D., Horace G. Bissell, Howard B. Briggs, Edwin C. Broome, Clarence R. Budlong, Allen H. Chase, Charles E. Clift, Elijah W. Bagster-Collins, Maurice H. Cooke, Arthur M. Cottrell, George R. Coughlan, Lefferts M. Dashiell, Robert S. Emerson, Frank B. Follett, Albert O. Foster, Ralph B. Harris, Daniel F. Holmes, Sidney D. Humphrey, Frank O. Jones, Clarence H. Lingham, Rev. Benjamin T. Livingston, Marcus W. Lyon, Jr., Arthur N. McCrillis, Herbert A. Matteson, Marcius H. Merchant, Isaac B. Merriman, George L. Miner, James R. D. Oldham, Charles D. Owens, Thomas E. Owens, William B. Peck, Rev. Joseph C. Robbins, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Francis A. Rugg, Wilbur A. Scott, Arthur C. Stone, Jonathan Taylor, Howard H. Utley, Howard M. Van Gelder, Professor Gregory D. Walcott, Byron S. Watson, Frank R. Wheeler, Roswell S. Wilcox, M. D., Frank N. Cady, Charles D. Millard, James O. Otis.

Several members of the faculty of '97's time in college were present at the reunion.

Announcement was made of the publication of a special limited edition of the Lincoln letters, hitherto unpublished, contained in the John Hay Library, and copies of this book were distributed as souvenirs to those at the reunion.

The first copy issued was handed to Mr. Rockefeller, who by his donation made possible the purchase of the Lincoln letters by the University.

"If our Lincoln collection grows during the next few years as it has grown during the past few years, we shall soon have the best collection of Lincoln material in the world," said Professor Koopman. The new book, published by the University, is dedicated to Mr. Rockefeller, in appreciation.

Dr. Faunce was represented at the reunion by Vice President Albert D. Mead, who spoke on the present needs of the University and its plans for expansion.

Everett Colby, a trustee of the University and president of the class, suffered a heart strain while playing tennis recently. His place was taken at the reunion by Rev. Dr. Joseph C. Robbins of New York.

Mr. Rockefeller, in acknowledging the dedication of the Lincoln volume, spoke briefly, expressing his happiness at being among his classmates again.

Professor Appleton received an ovation on being introduced, and spoke with humor, vigor and charm on various college themes.

Dr. Fred W. Marvel thanked the class for its interest in the new gymnasium. This class started the ball rolling for the new $2,000,000 athletic plant.

Other former teachers of "the boys of '97" who attended were Professor W. H. Kenerson, Professor H. P. Manning, Professor Henry B. Gardner and Professor Asa C. Crowell.

The following members of the class appear in Who's Who in America: Edwin C. Broome, Everett Colby, Elijah W. Bagster-Collins, Maurice M. Lyon, Jr., Rev. Joseph C. Robbins, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Professor Gregory D. Walcott.

The Sakonnet Inn was the scene of 1902's 25th reunion, with 50 members in attendance. On Monday afternoon the class motored to Round Hills, the home of Colonel E. H. H. Green, near New Bedford, to inspect the whaling ship "Wanderer," now preserved there by Colonel Green.

On Monday night the class met for a formal dinner at the University Club, Providence, and gathered there on Wednesday morning to take part in the Commencement procession.

1905 had a week-end reunion in the South County.

1907

The class held its 20th reunion at the Hotel Carleton, Narragansett. Dinner on Saturday evening was followed by a motion picture entertainment.

1909

A brief note on 1909's reunion will be found under "Brunonians Far and Near."

1912

With headquarters at the Plimpton Hotel, Watch Hill, the fifteenth reunion of 1912 began Friday evening and lasted until Monday. W. E. Sprackling was elected President at the class election. Earl E. Perkins of Providence was made permanent Secretary and H. G. Marsh, also of Providence, was chosen Treasurer.

Eighty-one graduates out of the class of two hundred signed the class register and answered the roll call, representing more than a dozen States and thirty cities. The member taking the longest trip to the reunion was Edward A. Adams of Hollywood, Cal. Edward C. Buzzell of Madison, Wis., also attended.

A golf tournament was held for two days, lasting during Saturday and Sunday, which was won by Earl E. Perkins, at the Misquamicut Club. A silver trophy was awarded for the best eighteen-hole net.

Tuesday night the class gathered for dinner at 6.30 p. m. at the Rhode Island Country Club, after having left Watch Hill Monday morning to attend the Class Day exercises at the University campus. Golf and bathing at the club's grounds were arranged by Daniel F. Larkin.

The Hotel Thorndike, Jamestown, was the scene of 1917's reunion. Number present 74. On Saturday evening a dinner was held, at which Don I. Ball '27, soloist of the University Musical Clubs, entertained. Horseshoe pitching, golf and tennis were on the program for Monday. In the afternoon a baseball game was held between the married men with chidren and those with none, practically all the members of the class present having escaped from single wretchedness. In the evening a dinner was held at which motion pictures of last year's football games were shown.

The classes of 1918, 1919, 1920 and 1923 held a joint reunion at the Point Judith Country Club with dinner at the Carleton Hotel, Narragansett. Golf and tennis matches were much enjoyed at the club. During the dinner speeches and short talks were given by Howard McPeck Thomas Black, Jr., J. Sinclair, M. J Cummings, Jr., J. Harold Williams and William Dewart. Orchestral music followed. Bridge was played by those who did not care for the out-of-door sports. The merrymaking lasted until a late hour.

1922

Fifty members of the class of 1922 attended the fifth reunion held at Puddlely Place, the home of Marshall Martin, in Rehoboth, Mass. An attractive program of sports was arranged, which included swimming and a baseball game. Lunch was served at noon, followed by a clambake in the afternoon.

1924 and 1925

The members of the two classes enjoyed a joint dinner at the Wannamoisett Golf Club.

1926

The "baby reunion" of the one-year class included a dinner at Jim Smith's Inn in Pawtuxet.

Mr. Rockefeller's Views of College Costs

As presiding officer at the alumni exercises in Sayles Hall, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., '97 proved himself one of the most effective and humorous speakers of recent years in that capacity. Among his outstanding qualities was that of audibility. He introduced a number of amusing stories into his discourse and then, settling down to serious business, devoted himself to a discussion of the cost of running a modern college and the relation of students' fees to the problem.

He spoke of the possibility of increasing these fees to meet the changing types of students and pointed out that in past years colleges were attended, for the most part, by men who were entering the ministry or the professions, whereas the university of today is attracting many students who come for a good time, or social considerations, or to fit themselves to earn money. While the charitable method of financing colleges for the benefit of men who were to take up professions which would yield them a small financial reurn was logical then, Mr. Rockefeller said he felt the student who sought an education which would later bring him large returns should bear a greater part of the cost of his training. He continued:

"The receipts of privately supported colleges and universities in this country during 1923-24 for current expenses were, in round figures, $140,000,000. Speaking broadly, one-half of this amount (although actually the figure is somewhat less) came from student fees, graduate and undergraduate combined; one-quarter (somewhat more) from endowment, one-quarter (somewhat more) from gifts and other sources.

"Thus it is evident that the student pays less rather than more than half the actual cost to the college for his education.

"Since 1914, almost unbelievable sums of money have been added to college endowments. The income on much of this new endowment has been absorbed in simply making good the loss in the buying power of the dollar, which is now equivalent to not more than two-thirds of what it was before the war. The income of many millions is going towards increased pay for college faculties.

"Nevertheless, these salaries are still below what they ought to be. Today, therefore, colleges and universities are confronted with the necessity of securing other sources of additional millions for endowment or increased current income. That these sums can be secured from private sources in addition to all that has been given during the past 10 years, is hardly probable.

"Assuming that the policy of charging the students the full amount which it costs to educate them were adopted, privately supported colleges and universities would double their present income from students' fees, which, as already stated, is approximately $70,000,000 a year. One can quickly figure the stupendous endowment necessary to yield such an income. Undoubtedly the parents of a large minority of these students could well afford to pay the full cost.

"But, assuming that not more than a quarter were so situated, even that would mean an immediate increase of $17,500,000 in current income from student fees, all of which would be clear gain and easily secured. For those students who could not meet these higher costs, scholarships and student aid would need to be used with increasing liberality, and student loan funds provided on a large scale. For most students other than those who go into the ministry or teaching, a loan either with or without interest, with the first payment date possibly 10 years after graduation, would meet the situation and not prove an undue burden. So soon as the first payment became due, the college income from this source should be constant and steady.

O. T. GILMORE

"Instead of securing endowment funds through the income of which current administrative deficits could be met, scholarship and loan funds could be sought in increasing proporion, either of which would doubtless be more readily obtained than funds for general endowment."

This address of Mr. Rockefeller's has been widely commented upon by the press of the United States, and so far as we have noted the comment is sympathetic and in a general way approving. It is felt that while the American college must always look to private beneficence for a large portion of its support, a higher tuition might properly be required of students who can afford it, and that the scholarship and loan systems should be expanded, in accordance with Mr. Rockefeller's suggestion, for the benefit of needy students.

The Alumni Monthly feels that the loan system in particular is capable of a more general and businesslike application.

Gifts to the University

At the exercises in Sayles Hall the announcement was made by President Faunce that United States Senator Jesse H. Metcalf had given the University the sum of $100,000 for the maintenance and improvement of the Metcalf Chemical Laboratory and its work.

In addition to the gift by Senator Metcalf, the trustees of the Loyalty Fund announced a gift of $35,000 to the college for the account of the Endowment and Buildings Fund Committee of 1925.

Senator Metcalf's gift was accompanied by conditions which were outlined as follows in the announcement by President Faunce:

"To be known as the Jesse Houghton Metcalf Fund, the principal to be kept securely invested and the net income only to be applied to advance and increase the usefulness and efficiency of the chemistry department of said University; by such means and in such manner, including (but without intending by such inclusion to limit the generality of the power and discretion of the Corporation of said University in the premises) the maintenance of additional laboratory facilities as the Corporation of said University shall from time to time deem advisable."

In a letter to President Faunce dated June 3, Senator Metcalf stated: "If this is satisfactory to you, I would be pleased to turn over to your treasurer the amount specified.

"As you know, I have already given a sum for the maintenance of the laboratory and I should like that also placed under this same fund."

From the Loyalty Fund trustees, President Faunce received the following letter signed by Alfred H. Gurney, secretary of the organization, and dated June 15:

"The trustees of the Loyalty Fund in meeting to-day voted that $35,000 be paid over to the University for the account of the Endowment and Buildings Fund Commitee of 1925. This is the second payment of the same amount to be made in connection with this fund; and the trustees of the Loyalty Fund wish to assure you that they are giving their best efforts to bring the attention of the fund to all the alumni of the University."

President Faunce announced that the class of 1902, at its 25th anniversary, had raised the sum of $25,000, the preceeds to be used to provide scholarships for lineal descendants of the class members, and on failure of this object to be used for the student loan fund of the college.

One thousand dollars was announced as the gift of Florence Pirce in memory of her brother, James Aldrich Pirce, Brown '92, to establish a scholarship, the income to be awarded annually at the discretion of the faculty. Mr. Pirce died in August, 1922.

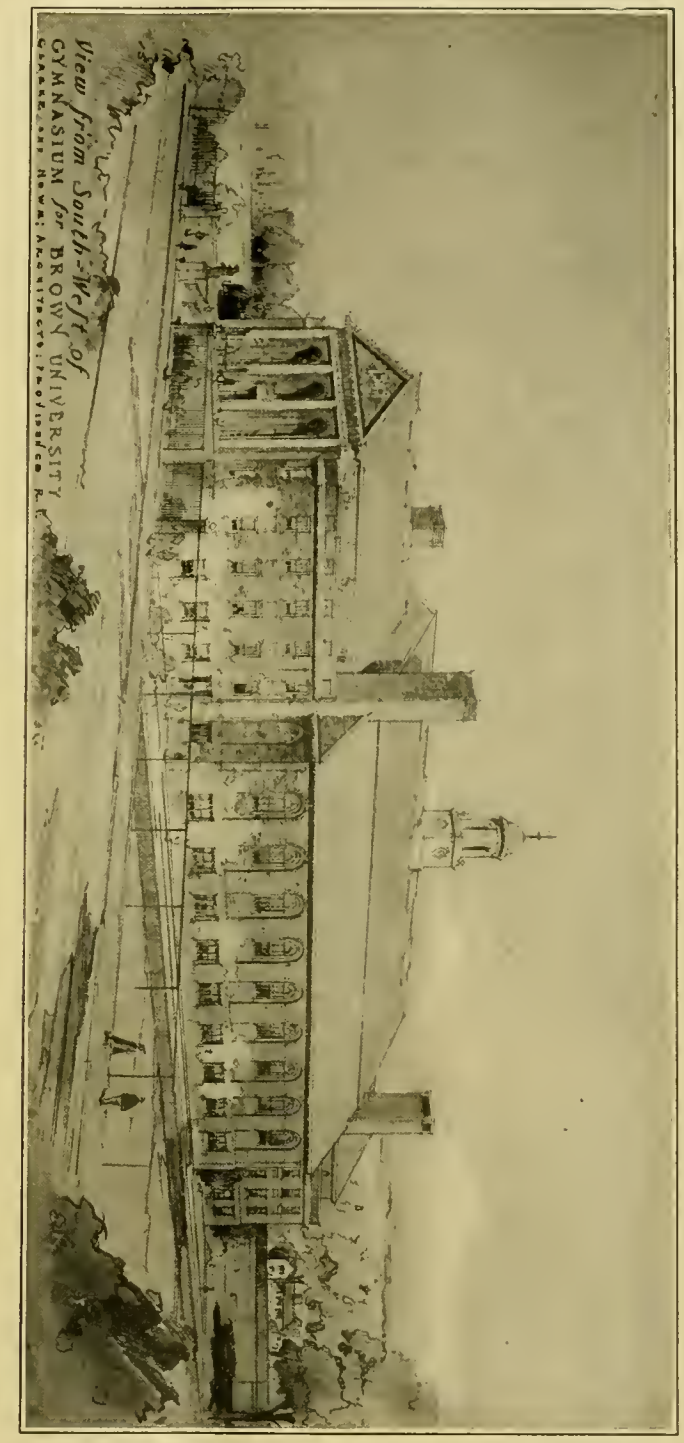
A gift of $500 in memory of Arthur Edward Breckenridge, Brown '17, was announced by his parents, the income to be spent annually in the purchase of books for the biological department.

A gift of $10,000 from Webster Knight '76 is to be used for the furnishing of Marston Hall.

The Hazard Professorship of Physics Fund was increased to $50,000 by the gift of $8,720 by Miss Caroline Hazard of Peace Dale.

A bequest of $5,000 to be known as the Hamilton B. Staples fund is provided for in the will of Francis H. Staples '94.

The class of 1905 announced a gift of at least $25,000, payable to the University at the 50th reunion of the class, the principal to be kept intact as the Class of 1905 Fund, and the income to be used for the general purpose of the University. This gift will be paid from life insurance on members of the class.



The class of '92 gave $3,500 to the University to be known as the Class of '92 Fund.

Outstanding Features of Commencement Week

As we go to press we find it necessary to omit several pages of interesting matter, chiefly concerning the Commencement season. We hope to publish most of this in our next issue

Class Day

Class Day (Monday) was bright and beautiful. The usual Under the Elms exercises occurred in the late afternoon at the South end of the middle campus. Linus J. Travers, chairman of the Class Day committee, welcomed the guests and presented Harold A. Broda, President of the Senior class, who presided at the exercises.

Donald I. Ball, class orator, praised the record of the class. Arthur L. Lawrence read the class poem. William P. Gunn, class prophet, introduced many college hits into his prophecy. John J. McGeeney-Dunne read the class ode.

President Faunce in his talk referred to two canes that he carried.

The first cane was the class cane of 1927 just presented to him by the Seniors. The second was that of "the first President of Brown, James Manning, probably 160 years old, a malacca stick, possibly a relic of the East Indian trade then flourishing in the colony."

"There," said Dr. Faunce, "you have the first and—not the last, the old and yet the new. Some cynic will say, 'but they're only sticks.' Koussevitsky's baton as he leads the Boston Symphony is only a stick. The sceptre of Augustus Caesar was but a stick and so was the rod that Moses stretched out over the Red Sea. The cross that symbolizes the Christian faith is made up of two sticks placed at right angles. To the cynic, nothing is worth owning.

"I like to have at each Commencement Week a symbol of the noble past and of the vigorous present. Old University Hall brings back John Hay and Adoniram Judson with its memories, and Hope College reminds us of Charles Evans Hughes, who lived there three years. We can never be away from the sages and philosophers of past generations.

"We have on our campus the bronze statue of Marcus Aurelius. In my Senior year I paid 25 cents for a copy of his 'Meditations' and I carried it around the world with me 15 years ago. I know of no other work in which so much solid worth is compressed in such small space. I challenge you to take the thinker and the doer of ages past and make him a companion as you go out into the life of to-day.

"And the other cane is the cane of 1927. All the world is listening to a youth, Charles Lindbergh, and the radio is bringing his voice to us all, as it did to me just before I came here. We are told that 150 years ago to-day on the 13th of June, the young Lafayette landed in America to help emancipate her from tyranny Ah, the daring of youth! . . . The world needs audacity to meet its difficulties. And so I call on you to carry out with you not only the wisdom of John Hay and Marcus Aurelius, but also the daring of Lafayette and Lindbergh. You don't know what is coming, but you will face the unknown with a smile."

Class Day evening brought a great throng to the moonlit campus for the promenade concert and dance. The grounds were hung with Japanese lanterns and the class numerals blazed from the Brown Union and Sayles Hall. A spacious platform between Sayles and University Halls provided a smooth surface for dancing out of doors, for which there was an excellent orchestra. In Sayles Hall also there was dancing, the great auditorium being decked with ferns. There was the usual class parade down the hill and the class dined afterward at the Biltmore.

At The Church

The undergraduate speakers at the church, all Seniors, were Edward Thayer Richards of Mount Vernon, N. Y., recipient of final honors in English, who spoke on "Unequal Equality;" Gardner Cummings Hudson of Fitchburg, Mass., recipient of final highest honors in history, who spoke on "The Menace of Centralization," and Frederick Bernays Wiener of New York city, recipient of final highest honors in history, who spoke on "Panaceas and Progress."

Richards said: "The college authorities are still trying to apply to the undergraduates today the principles of 50 years ago. . . . The honor student should be unhampered by the dead level of mediocrity, that he may escape regulation, requirement and standardization.

Hudson said that the States could better administer prohibition and that if the child labor amendment had been enacted it would in some cases have prevented young people from working their way through college.

Wiener said: "With politics quiescent, optimism triumphant and prosperity rampant, the American people have leisure—and do not know how to use it. There come recurrent periods of intense absorption in unusual and exotic novelties, seasons of immensely popular but exceedingly short-lived fads. The public has been successively interested, to the exclusion of all else, in Tut-ankh-Amen, in Mah Jongg, in cross-word puzzles, in Charleston marathons, in channel swimming, in asking yet another question. . . . The reappearing national monomaniacs, while in themselves symptomatic of the prevailing boredom, nevertheless signify an earnest desire for something better, and though the hand may be unsteady, it is at least reaching out.

"And in other fields there are more promising signs. In the unquestioning post-war faith in education, in the popular appetite for outlines of this and surveys of that, in the increased literary and artistic productivity of the country, may be found the beginnings of a new trend. Education has become the watchword; and a novelty is now considered desirable in direct ratio as it seems educational. 'Seek ye the truth, the truth shall make ye free.' "

Degrees

Degrees in courses were conferred as follows: Bachelor of arts 128, bachelor of philosophy 178, bachelor of science in engineering 30, bachelor of science in chemistry 3, bachelor of education 9. Total 348.

Honorary degrees were conferred on nine persons, and on the day preceding Commencement 51 advanced degrees were conferred, so that the total was 408.

Honorary Degrees

Honorary degrees were awarded as follows:

A. M. WALLACE RUTHERFORD LANE, of the class of 1899, who after years of study at Brown and at Yale, became practitioner and teacher of law in Iowa and Illinois, and has so carried great civic and financial responsibilities as to win new and glad recognition from his Alma Mater.

A. M. CLARENCE MONROE BOOKMAN, leader in civic endeavor, director of social agencies in Cincinnati, organizer of the citizens of Providence in establishing their first Community Chest, bringing the vigor of youth and the wisdom of experience into the upbuilding of the modern city.

D. D. WILLIAM AUSTIN HILL, of the class of 1902, who from the pastorate of a single church entered years ago the onerous task of organizing the Baptist denomination for high achievement and by clear insight and Christian temper has gained the respect and confidence of the churches of America.

DOCTOR OF ART. WALTER SARGENT, painter, designer, Professor of Art in the University of Chicago, who has dared to believe that even our smoke-laden cities may be beautiful, who has organized the human craving for beauty into schools and curriculums and endowments, and made it effective in the homes and haunts of men.

D. D. EVERETT CARLETON HERRICK, trusted leader of one great church, now chosen as President of Newton Theological Seminary to train leaders of churches throughout the land, who by his reverence for Christian faith and Christian scholarship, his insight and common sense and devotion to the Kingdom of God, is summoning a host of helpers to His side.

ED. DOC. EDWIN CORNELIUS BROOME, son of Rhode Island and of Brown, in the class of 1897, who through educational leadership in several cities, has steadily risen to the high position of Superintendent of Schools in Philadelphia, guiding with energy and wisdom the expenditure of many millions each year and leading thousands of young Americans into worthy conceptions of private duty and public service.

LITT. D. MARK SULLIVAN, correspondent and publicist who after brief apprenticeship in the practice of law graduated into literature, who by vivid description and shrewd analysis of public thought and action is aiding our complex nation to understand itself and interpreting Our Times to the greater times yet to be.

LL. D. WILLIAM LOUIS POTEAT, teacher of biology in the Southland since 1878, retiring this month from distinguished service as President of Wake Forest College in North Carolina, fearless follower of scientific method, unswerving defender of religion, who in a time of timidity and intolerance has aided thousands to keep the open mind and the Christian faith.

SC. D. MICHAEL IDVORSKY PUPIN, the gift of Serbia to America, trained in the scientific methods of two hemispheres, master in Engineering, in Mathematical Physics and Electro-mechanics, both thinker and believer, both dreamer and doer, who carries in his own person the unity not only of hands across the sea but of educated minds around the world.

Advanced Degrees Awarded

The practice of awarding advanced degrees on the day preceding Commencement has for a second year proved convenient, taking as it does a considerable burden off of the graduation exercises at the church. This year at Sayles Hall 51 advanced degrees were awarded, five of them to candidates for doctor of philosophy, 10 master of science degrees and 36 master of arts degrees. The hall was well filled.

On the platform were President Faunce, Vice President Mead, Dean Richardson of the Graduate School, Registrar Guild and Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute, the last-named of whom was the speaker of the afternoon. He traced the progress of medicine from pre-Christian days. He told of the modern achievement wherein "we stand awed before the common fact of transformation into a normal, comely, intelligent child from a stunted, pot-bellied, slavering cretin, merely by the administration of the substance of the thyroid gland of animals."

The complexities of the human body and its ills have demanded special institutions and trained men for the formidable task of research, Dr. Flexner said, and occasional voices decry the domination of medicine by science.

"We may," he contended, "undertake nevertheless to organize the facilities which make the prosecution of research more consistent and less a matter of chance. Who would presume to confine, restrict by organizations, a band of giants? It is enough to provide them material resources with which to perform the wonder-working tasks.

"This alone is the purpose and the justification for organization of science: to afford opportunity commensurate with the objects to be obtained, for both the giants and their associates of smaller stature, for him who blazes the trail and him who clears the path."

Associated Alumni Elect

Wiley H. Marble '12 of Worcester, Mass., was elected on the eve of Commencement Day as President of the Associated Alumni, succeeding Henry G. Clark '07. Other officers chosen were: First Vice President—Richard R. Hunter 98, New York city; Second Vice President—Frederick A. Ballou, Jr., '16, Providence; Third Vice President—George B. Bullock '15, Boston; and Treasurer—Edward K. Aldrich, Jr., 02, Providence. Alfred H. Gurney '07 continues in office as Alumni Secretary.

Voting for the first time for members of the Brown University Athletic Council, the alumni selected as their representatives on that new board David L. Fultz '98 of New York for a two-year term and Byron

S. Watson '97 of Providence for a one-year term.

Mr. Fultz, a lawyer of the firm of Murphy & Fultz, played 'Varsity football and baseball in college, later gaining prominence as coach in those sports at Brown and elsewhere. He played professional baseball for eight years and is still active as an official in important football games. Mr. Watson, a football letter man as an undergraduate, has served on a number of prominent alumni committees, and holds the treasurership of the Brown Alumni Loyalty Fund. His term as treasurer of the Associated Alumni expired last month.

Phi Beta Kappa

The Rhode Island Alpha of Phi Beta Kappa has elected William H. P. Faunce President, Charles E. Hughes Vice President, Professor William T. Hastings Secretary, William W. Moss Treasurer, Professor Wilfred H. Munro Historian and Claude R. Branch Auditor. The following were elected alumni members: Philip J. Reid '87, editor of the Detroit Free Press; Everett Colby '97, Clarence E. Ayers '12 and Dean of Freshmen Kenneth O. Mason '14.

Elections

"Win" Schuster of East Douglas, Mass., has been elected captain of the Brown baseball team.

Horace Partridge of Brookline, Mass., has been re-elected captain and manager of the Brown golf team.

The International Club has elected Arthur E. Schroeder '29 president. Miss Rosina Quinones and Miss Karoline Thayer are respectively vice-president and secretary-treasurer.

H. L. Swan of Winthrop, Mass., has been elected captain of the Brown tennis team. He played number three on this season's 'Varsity and lost only to his Wesleyan opponent in the major matches of the year.

Willis H. Stephens of Detroit, Mich., was named 'Varsity track captain at Brown on June 27. The vote for the leader of the 1928 team was conducted by mail and the announcement of the election was made by Dr. Marvel. Stephens prepared for college at Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., and is a pole vaulter on the team. He is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

The Cammarian Club members for next year are almost wholly men who have made their mark in athletics at Brown. They are: Frank A. Spellman of Somers, Conn., president of the Junior class, captain of the wrestling team, Pi Kappa and Phi Kappa Psi; Roy E. Randall of Brockton, Mass., captain of the football team, 2d baseman of the baseball team, Pi Kappa and Delta Kappa Epsilon; Charles R. Consodine of Brewster, Mass., vice-president of the Junior class, member of the football team, Delta Upsilon; Kenneth A. O'Brien of Yonkers, N. Y., managing editor of the Herald, Pi Kappa, Owl and Ring, Sphinx and Psi Upsilon; John M. Heffernan of Lynn, Mass., captain of the basketball team, 2d vice-president of the Junior class, right fielder on the baseball team, Pi Kappa and Phi Kappa Psi; Nelson B. Jones, Jr., of Hingham, Mass., treasurer of the Junior class, member of the football and lacrosse teams, Pi Kappa and Phi Delta Theta, Frank K. Singiser, Jr., of Troy, N. Y., president of the Debating Union, member of the Dramatic Society, Delta Upsilon; John G. Getz, Jr., of Kent, Ohio, member of the football team, Sphinx, Pi Kappa and Phi Delta Theta; Richard C. Gurney of Brockton, Mass., member of the football team, baseball team (catcher), Sphinx, Owl and Ring, Pi Kappa and Alpha Delta Phi.

Fellowships for Graduate School

On July 1 it was announced that Henry D. Sharpe '94 of Providence has given five fellowships of one thousand dollars each to enable five students in the Graduate School to pursue advanced courses there. The fellowships, which constitute a splendid and exemplary gift, will be in biology, English, history, mathematics and Romance Languages. It is by such wise assistance as this that the Graduate School must grow.

Notes of the Month

The next fraternity rushing season will be early in December.

Dr. W. W. Keen '59 was the oldest graduate in the Commencement procession.

P. E. Donnelly '29 won the university handball tournament in May, defeating B. R. Millington '27 in the finals.

Delta Upsilon won, in May, the interfraternity baseball championship, defeating Beta Theta Pi, the runner-up.

Raymond Orteig, donor of the $25,000 prize won by Lindbergh in his New York-to-Paris flight, is the father of E. A. Orteig, Brown '20.

Lacrosse letters have been awarded by the Athletic Council to Webber Haines captain; I. Slater, R. H. Case, C. W. Provonchee, G. N. Fessenden, W. S. Dodge, A. Cornsweet, N. B. Jones, A. Abrams, L. H. Scherck, H. Semel, J. A. Taylor and W. C. Fisher.

Yale's athletic schedules for next season show a swimming meet with Brown at New Haven on Dec. 10, a wrestling meet with Brown at Providence on Jan. 14, and a soccer game with Brown at New Haven on Oct. 14. The usual Brown-Yale football game will be played at New Haven this year.

George J. Heidt '18, for nine years secretary of the Brown Union and Brown Christian Association, has resigned to become a member of the staff of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York, of which Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is pastor. He will manage the business affairs of the new Riverside Drive plant of the church.

An Appreciation

Editor Brown Alumni Monthly:

I do not understand how your magazine, excellent in every detail, appears regularly month after month with its uncomplaining air of prosperity at the continuing subscription price of only one dollar a year. It can safely be presumed that the Editor, Manager and their associates receive their pay in the love of doing a good job to the satisfaction of themselves and all others concerned.

Gentlemen:

Your Modern Business Course and Service, which I completed some time ago, has proved of great value to me.

It is an interesting fact that I found an argument in the first volume that enabled me to close a sale which I am satisfied I would not otherwise have obtained. The commission on this sale amounted to more than twice the cost of the Course; so in my particular case, the immediate return on my investment was most satisfactory.

I give the Modern Business Course due credit for its part in my rise in six years from salesman to president of this company.

Very truly yours,

A. K. Haines
President

A. K. Haines

The interesting booklet which was Mr. Haines' introduction to the Course will be sent you on request. It answers questions which have doubtless been in your mind; it contains business facts of interest to mature men. The coupon brings it.

Professor Horace M. Reynolds of the English Department sailed last month for a tour of Ireland, where he will visit some of the leaders in Irish thought and, in the course of his journey, follow the footsteps of Synge over the roads of western Ireland. Professor Reynolds is assisting in making a collection of the best new Irish books for the John Hay Library and is planning to give an extension course next fall on Ireland and Celtic literature.

Professor Theodore Collier will give two courses in modern European history in the Summer School at Clark University this summer.

Professor Horatio E. Smith of the Department of Romance Languages has been appointed one of the five examiners to prepare the French papers set for all colleges by the College Entrance Board for 1928. He will also act as general editor of a series of French classics to be published by Scribners. During this year he has had articles in Modern Language Notes and in the Forum.

Professor Louis Landre of the Department of Romance Languages has been greatly in demand during the academic year as a speaker on topics having to do with modern France. His travels have taken him to the Middle West as far as Iowa, to Washington, and to Ottawa, Canada.

Professor A. E. Rand of the Department of Romance Languages was recently re-elected President of the Providence group of the Alliance Francaise.

Members of the Department of Economics expect to be busy during the summer in several lines of endeavor. Professor James P. Adams has accepted an invitation to a visiting professorship of economics at Northwestern University. He will offer a course in public utility regulation and participate in the research activities of the Institute of Land Economics and Public Utility Research. Professor Killough will be engaged as consulting specialist of the Department of Agriculture and director of the survey on cotton utilization carried on under the joint auspices of the Cotton Textile Institute and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture, at Washington.

Professor Harry E. Miller will study banking facilities in Providence and neighborhood in connection with the industrial survey of Metropolitan Providence. The Harvard University Press published last month Professor Miller's book, "Banking Theories in the United States." James H. Shoemaker will spend part of the summer in study at the University of Wisconsin and hopes also to travel in Mexico before returning to College Hill in September.

President Faunce was the speaker at the graduation exercises of the Mary C. Wheeler School, held in Providence on June 2. He also delivered the baccalaureate address at Wheaton College on June 21.

The students in the Saturday morning seminar class at the School of Education gave Professor Walter Ballou Jacobs a handsome traveling bag at the last meeting of the class on May 28. Arthur E. Marley '24 and J. D. Geary made speeches of presentation. Professor Jacobs was the delegate from the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools at the inauguration of John Edgar Park as President of Wheaton College on May 21.

Professor A. K. Potter was elected moderator of the Charitable Baptist Society of Providence at the last annual meeting, succeeding the late Clarence H. Guild, father of F. T. Guild, Registrar. It is this body that was chartered by the colonial legislature in 1774 for financing the erection of a meeting house "for the Publick Worship of Almighty God, and also to Hold Commencement in." Without interruption of its functions and with but slight changes in its charter, the society still serves as the financial agent and trustee of the First Baptist Church. One of the committees is that entrusted with the care and repair of the building and grounds, and Professor A. E. Watson has served on it for a quarter century, acting as its chairman for the last half of that time.

Professor Fowler of the Department of Biblical Literature gave the Memorial Day address at Bluehill, Me., this year.

The house of Scribner recently issued the final volume of Charles Foster Kent's "Student's Old Testament," under the title, "Proverbs and Didactic Poems." This volume unfinished at the death of Professor Kent, who was a former member of the Brown Faculty, was completed by Professor Millar Burrows of the Department of Biblical Literature and published with the names of both Burrows and Kent on the title page.

Professor F. N. Tompkins of the Division of Engineering is the new chairman of the Providence section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. The section was organized about ten years ago and for most of that time Professor Tompkins has acted as secretary-treasurer. At the same election Professor Watson was named vice chairman; so the activities of this engineering body for the next year will be largely in the hands of the University. Incidentally, Professor Watson was one of four judges to determine the grades of certain technical papers presented to the Northeastern section of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the regional convention held in Pittsfield, Mass., May 25-28.

Professor Ben C. Clough of the Department of Greek and Latin Classics is conducting the weekly page of the Providence Journal devoted to literature and the arts. Professor Clough is also active as a reviewer, having had reviews the past semester in the Classical Weekly of "A Poetic Calendar" and "The Vita Merlini," (translated by John J. Parry); in the Boston Transcript of half a dozen books, including "Mr. Fortune's Maggot," by S. T. Warner and "Romanticism," by Lascelles Abercrombie; and in the Providence Journal of Professor Allinson's "Lucian," A. E. Taylor's "Plato" and Nixon's "Martial."

Professor Geer will spend the summer in Greece and Italy. He recently published a note in the Classical Journal under the title, "The Cave of Euripides." Professor Spaeth, colleague of Professor Geer in the Department of Greek and Latin Classics, will be in Greece and Italy during the first semester of next year on leave of absence. His reviews in the Classical Weekly and the Classical Journal have been of "The Story of the World's Literature," by John Macy, "The Mind of Rome," and "Readings from the Literature of Ancient Rome in English Translations," by Dora Pym.

Professor K. K. Smith addressed the cum laude students of the Classical High school, Providence, on May 26.

Graydon S. DeLand of the Department of Romance Languages and Mrs. DeLand were in charge of a South American tour that left New York on June 23 on the steamship Santa Teresa for the Panama Canal, Peru, Chile, the Andes, Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil. The party is due to arrive in New York on Aug. 29. The DeLands are experienced travelers and have been successful in conducting tours de luxe to South America.

Robert S. Thomson of the Department of History is one of three American students awarded a Graduate Fellowship for the next academic year by the Commission for Relief in Belgium Educational Foundation. He will carry on the study of the history of the Belgian Congo at Brussels University. The Fellowships were established in 1920 to commemorate the wartime relief work done by Herbert C. Hoover '16, honorary, and his colleagues.

How Is Your CREDIT?

YESTERDAY—life insurance agents were considered a bore, a time consuming nuisance. That prejudice has disappeared now.

Today, if you ask a banker about your credit, he asks you about your life insurance.

But, though you may have enough insurance to satisfy your banker, you may not have exactly the right arrangement of policies to secure you and your dependents the maximum of future security.

A John Hancock agent is a specialist in security for the future, the foundation of mental serenity.

Ask him to come in.

1861

Dr. Charles E. Hosmer observed his 90th birthday at his home in South Billerica, Mass., on May 25 last. Dr. Hosmer is believed to be the only living grandson of a participant in the battle of Lexington in 1775. He himself is a veteran of the Civil War, having enlisted in the Tenth Rhode Island Regiment while he was a post graduate student at Brown.

1873

Frank Mason Mathewson, one-time President of the Brown Club of Eastern Maine and an active alumnus for a half century, died in Portland, Maine, on June 16, 1927. He was born in Providence Nov. 2, 1852, the son of Parley Mason and Lucy Ann Mathewson and was educated in the public schools of the city and at the University Grammar School. He entered Brown in 1870, completing the Bachelor of Philosophy course in three years. While in college he was a member of Theta Delta Chi and was likewise active in the Hammer and Tongs, the enterprising dramatic organization of that period. After graduation he was for several years connected with the office of his father in Providence as a cotton broker. Then he engaged in a wholesale sand and gravel business in New York, continuing in it until the death of his wife, who was Miss Rachel Graham Jackson of Providence, in February, 1917. Since then he had been with the Grand Trunk Railway System. He was a faithful attendant at the meetings of the Brown Club in Portland and always maintained a strong interest in the University. The Alumni Secretary recalls him as one who truly merited the designation, "gentleman of the old school."

1874

The Albany Churchman in its issue for May, 1927, said, under the heading of the Church of the Holy Cross and the Mary Warren Free Institute, Troy: The wonderfully combined record of Rector, Choirmaster and Sexton—the Rev. Edward W Babcock, W. W. Rousseau, C. E., and J. W. Wagstaff—still continues and will, God willing, total eighty-three and one-half years in June! Such associated services are probably unequalled in connection with any other Church in the United States." Babcock has been rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, which is the chapel of the Mary Warren Free Institute, of which he is principal, since 1896.

1876

Yale University conferred on Dr. Charles Value Chapin ot Providence, last month, the degree of LL. D. In presenting him for the degree, Professor William Lyon Phelps said: "A graduate of Brown and of the Bellevue Medical College in New York, Dr. Chapin has a magnificent record as a promoter of health and foe of disease. He has been health officer of the city of Providence since 1884, and city registrar since 1889. He is the leading figure in the development and standardization of public health practice in the United States. To him we owe the formulation of the entire modern viewpoint in the control of communicable disease. His book on 'Sources and Modes of Infection' (1910) is highly important. In 1903 the American Medical Association had voted that Dr. Chapin's method would do 'infinite harm;' to-day the whole world follows his lead. Dr. Chapin has no talent for publicity; but those who are familiar with the history of the movement for public health look back and at and up to him."

1879

Charles H. J. Douglas gives his address as Engadine Apartments, 1861 W. 10th st., Los Angeles, Cal. Douglas had been living in Westerly, R. I., since his retirement from teaching in 1923.

1888

Capt. E. H. Brownell, C. E. C., U. S. N., who has been on duty at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., for the last year, is now at the Navy Yard, Boston, Mass.

Dr. Ralph W. Jackson died suddenly in Washington, D. C., on May 22, 1927, while in Washington attending a convention. He was born in Waterville, Me., May 13, 1868, the son of Dr. John H. and Clara (Wentworth) Jackson. He came to Brown from Fall River (Mass.) High School and after receiving his degree entered Long Island College Hospital, from which he was graduated with an M. D. in 1892. He soon became known as a specialist in surgery, and during the latter years of his life had offices in Fall River and in Boston. He was a consultant on the staffs of two Fall River hospitals, a member of the American Medical Association, the American Proctologic Society, of which he was President in 1923-24, the Massachusetts Medical Society, Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Phi. He was married Dec. 26, 1896, to Miss Gertrude Pearson of Fall River, and she and one son, Eric P. Jackson of the class of 1920, survive him. To the widow and the son the class extends its earnest sympathy.

Professor Vernon P. Squires, who has been on leave in California during the last academic year, has returned to his home in Grand Forks, N. D., where he is Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, University of North Dakota.

Rev. Charles A. Denfield, for the last 19 years rector of St. James Episcopal Church, Woonsocket, R. I., has asked to be relieved of his duties. His plans, according to the Providence Journal, are to give up active work by next fall, "and ultimately make his home in the place of his birth (Westboro, Mass.) where he still maintains a domicile."

Marshall S. Brown, Dean of the Faculties, New York University, was recently elected a member of the Council for the Phi Beta Kappa Alumni Association in New York. He is and has been for a good many years the president of the Beta Chapter, Phi Beta Kappa, of New York. Dean Brown is completing his thirty-third year of service with New York University, where he is head of the Department of History as well as Dean of the Faculties. While the Chancellor of N. Y. U. was absent recently for six months, Dean Brown was chairman of the Administrative Committee which conducted the affairs of the University in that period.

H. H. Rice and Mrs. Rice have changed their residence from 446 Palmer Avenue West to 204 Kirby Avenue East, Detroit, Mich.

Rev. Albert E. Hylan has begun his duties as pastor of the Poquonnock Bridge Baptist Church, Poquonnock Bridge, Conn. Rev. George R Atha '95 of Groton, Conn., was one of the ministers who joined in welcoming Hylan to their neighborhood.

1895

Dallas Lore Sharp was the principal speaker at the annual reunion of the Glen Falls High School Alumni Association and reception to the graduating class in Glens Falls, N. Y., on June 21.

1896

Lewis M. Carr represented Brown at the centennial celebration of the founding of Shurtleff College, Alton, Ill., on June 15 and 16. Carr, who is a banker in Alton, is also a Trustee of Shurtleff.

1897

Professor John Harrington Cox of the Department of English, West Virginia University, will lecture for nine weeks during the summer at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

Rev. William M. Faux's new address is 1211 Benton ave., Springfield, Mo.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has given $1,600,000 for the restoration of French monuments in addition to the million already paid in and spent. "The French people bear in grateful remembrance," said the New York World editorially, "the aid Mr. Rockefeller's previous gift afforded in the conservation of Versailles and Fontainbleau and in the restoration of Rheims Cathedral, damaged in the war. Such gifts have a value far beyond that marked down in the monetary exchanges in promoting international good feeling."

Harold T. Miller reports that his business address has been changed to Statler Bldg., Boston, and his mail address to 22 James st., Brookline, Mass. Miller is engineer for the National Tube Company, New England district.

Howard J. Greene, who entered with the class as a special student, died at the Jane Brown Memorial Hospital in Providence on June 4, 1927, after a long illness. Since his college days he had been identified with Oliver Johnson & Co., wholesale and retail paints, and was secretary and treasurer of the corporation at the time of his death. During the World War he was a leading "Four Minute" man. He was later identified with several civic campaigns in Providence, was prominent in the financial affairs of the Republican party and took a great interest in the finances of the Central Congregational Church, of which he was a member. He was married June 8, 1898, to Miss Mary Isabelle Cook of Chicago, and she and one son, Denison W. Greene '24, survive him. He also leaves a sister, wife of Theodore F. Pevear '02, of Rochester, N. Y. Greene was a director of the Industrial Trust Co., vice president of the Squantum Association, a member of numerous clubs and of Delta Kappa Epsilon. A strong citizen, a memorable companion and friend.

Fatigue
requires RELIEF
When the brain is tired and memory lags, fatigue is the result. School teachers, clergymen, architects, and all professions that demand brain work or concentration on difficult problems need HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

It increases nerve force and muscular power, the inclination for work returns.
A teaspoonful three times a day in a glass of cold water.
Refreshes and stimulates. Mental and physical weariness disappear.
Non-alcoholic. Scientifically prepared. Constant in quality.

A card recently received at the Alumni Office gives the address of Harry M. Cobb as 1612 Paloma st., Pasadena, Cal.

1905

Dr. Earle B. Cross of the Faculty of the Rochester Theological Seminary has recently published through the University of Chicago Press his book entitled "The Hebrew Family."

Frank A. Burr has been a member of the Faculty of Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, Ga., during the past academic year. His home address remains 63 Lowell ave., Providence.

1906

Rev. John E. Flemming, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Marion, Ind., received the honorary degree of D. D. from the College of the Ozarks, Clarksville, Ark., last month. The college, one of the best known Presbyterian institutions in the Middle West, is prominent for its young peoples' work.

1907

The Class of 1907 Scholarship, awarded to the member of the Senior class on College Hill who "combines in a high degree scholastic ability, athletic ability and character," was awarded this year to Frank Miles Flint of Friendship Heights, Md. The award was made in chapel on May 20, with Claude R. Branch as the speaker. George Hurley and "Shan" Clark sat on the platform as guests of the University and of Professor Henry B. Huntington of the committee on academic honors. Flint has had an excellent all-around career on the Hill, having been a varsity wrestler, a member of Pi Kappa, the Sphinx, the Economics Club, the Interfraternity Governing Board, the Cammarian Club and of Phi Beta Kappa in his Junior year. His fraternity is Kappa Sigma. He is the third man to win the scholarship, his predecessors being Parkman Sayward in 1925 and Mark F. Coles in 1926. Flint expects to study law.

1908

Under date of May 12, 1927, the Los Angeles (Cal.) Herald said: "A Los Angeles advertising man, A. J. Olsen, has 'crashed' into the literary field with a story on the fourth dimension, 'The Fourth Dimensional Roller Press,' published in the current issue of the national scientific fiction magazine, 'Amazing Stories,' it became known to-day. Olsen, who writes under the name of 'Bob' Olsen, gives a scientific explanation of the much discussed and little understood fourth dimension." It is also related that Al has had other stories published previously.

Frank G. Shinn is with the Mohawk Mills, Amsterdam, N. Y., as production engineer.

Al Roberts is now connected with the Remington Rand Business Service Corporation as a department specialist at Newark, N. J.

Howard Payne had the pleasure of watching his young son take a couple of prizes at Moses Brown School this spring.

Bert Reid, who lives at 101 Westwood ave., Edgewood, had a daughter born in his family on June 6th.

Rowdy Smith is President and Treasurer of the R. E. Smith Corporation, Bridgeport, Conn., experts in the erection and glazing of all makes of steel sash.

Chauncey Wheeler has completed his eighth year of teaching a course on contracts to the Senior engineering students in their spring term. Chauncey may now be grouped as one of '09's Rowdy Engineers, for he is listed in the Brown Catalogue as Lecturer in Engineering.

The class conducted one of its customary successful reunions under the leadership of Messrs. Sherwood, Leach and Buffum, meeting at Jamestown Saturday and at the Agawam Hunt Club Tuesday for golf and dinner in combination with the classes of 1906-7 and '08. Everybody had a good time even if they may not have improved their golf games. Those present at one or more of the gatherings were Messrs. Wheeler, Sherwood, Hollen, Tanner, Wightman, E. R. Smith, Ward, Chafee, Poland, Champlin, Nash, Buffum, Sykes, A. M. Chace, Meader, Budlong, Huxford, Willemin, Whitmarsh, Seabury, Henderson, Clarke, Kirley, Turner, Hughes, W. E. Goodwin, Chambers, D. Jackson, H. Jackson, Everett and Dodge.

Bob Nash represents one of the class's long-distance reunion men. This time Bob came on from Grand Rapids, Mich., where he is superintendent of construction with the telephone company.

1910

The 17th Reunion of the class was celebrated at Wannamoisett Country Club on Tuesday,, June 14. More talent was uncovered at the dinner in the evening than on the golf course in the afternoon. The following men were present: Bill Sweet, Clarence Richards, Charlie Post, Jim Battey, Ralph Palmer, Al Farwell, Claude Wood, Joe Cull, Johnnie Johnson, Hoke Horton, Bill Freeman, Ed Spicer, Dick Allen, Max Krause and George Kelley. Kelley took the honors for distance traveled to attend the Reunion. His home is in Ambridge, Pa., where he is connected with the American Bridge Co. Max Krause was next, having come from Lebanon, Pa. After the dinner a meeting was held at which plans were discussed for a special Reunion in Providence next fall on the date of the Brown-Dartmouth game, as well as for the 18th annual affair in June, 1928.

Joshua Bell is the chairman of the Providence branch of the American Jewish Congress.

The beautiful new Ritz Carlton Hotel at Arlington and Newbury sts., Boston, was built by Chase & Gilbert of which firm Linwood C. Chase is senior member. The same firm built the Boston Motor Mart two months ahead of schedule and made some of their older and more experienced competitors sit up and take notice. Chase's partner, Royce W. Gilbert, is a graduate of M. I. T., 1909.

Clarence W. Miller's new address is 81 Smith st., West Haven, Conn. "There is no particular comment to make regarding the change," he wrote. "I've simply moved."

Professor Robert C. Dexter of the Department of Social and Political Science, Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., has resigned to become secretary of the new department of Social Relations of the American Unitarian Association. He will assume his duties Sept. 1, with his headquarters at 25 Beacon st., Boston. "Louie," as most of us knew him in college, has made a name for himself in the field of sociology since he left College Hill. His book, "Social Adjustment," published this year, is in use at Dartmouth and other colleges as a textbook. He has also written many articles for educational and sociological journals and was the author of the chapter on Rhode Island in "These United States," a volume that caused some discussion a few years ago.

Dan Mahoney is with the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Co., Casper, Wyoming, so his brother Bob '12 writes the Alumni Office from Chanute, Kan.

Edward A. C. Murphy of the Utica Country Day School, New Hartford, N. Y., had an article in School Science and Mathematics for May, 1927, under the title of "Aids in Teaching General Science."

1915

The sympathy of the class goes out to the family and relatives of Richard Boardman Stanley, who died in New York on May 17, 1927, following a desperate fight of fifteen weeks to combat the result of three necessary operations. Since leaving Brown, Dick read law until 1917, when he volunteered for war service in the U. S. Naval Aviation Corps. He served in convoy detail from Hampton Roads to France and when honorably discharged at the close of hostilities he held the rank of lieutenant. He entered the candy business in Chicago in 1919 and moved to New York in 1924, there establishing his own business. He was married to Vera Costikyan on Aug. 26, 1918, and she and four daughters survive him, as well as a brother, Herbert W. Stanley '12. Brown has lost a loyal alumnus by Dick's death. His friends in college will remember him for his native wit, humor and good fellowship. He was a member of Phi Sigma Kappa.

Roy Burnell, who entered with 1914, stayed out a year and came back to enroll with the class, is a Captain of Field Artillery, U. S. A., and at present is taking special work at Iowa State College, Ames, Ia.

Gordon B. Ewing is treasurer and manager of the East Greenwich, R. I., News, which is described as "an independent newspaper published ever Thursday." Ewing, we understand, is running the newspaper in connection with his other advertising enterprises.

R. E. Copeland notes the fact that he is a sales engineer with his business address, 185 Church st., and his home address, 213 Fountain st., New Haven, Conn.

W. Randall Waterman has been re-named as assistant professor of history at Dartmouth.

Clifford Hathaway received his M. D. at Harvard Medical School last month and is now an interne at the Rhode Island Hospital, Providence.

1916

Captain W. C. (Curt) Chase, 14th Cavalry, U. S. A., is now stationed at Fort Sheridan, Illinois.

1918

George C. Hull has become a member of the editorial staff of the Providence Journal, winning promotion from the news staff with which he has been connected for some years. Two of George's associates in the editorial room are Fred C. Perry '12 and Henry T. Samson '19.

Pat Curry, still going strong in the credit department, Carnegie Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh, has several likely Freshmen prospects on his list, we hear, and is doing his best to interest them in Brown. We commend Pat's work in this line to other members of the class outside New England.

The campus will miss George J. Heidt, for the last nine years secretary of the Brown Union and of the Y. M. C. A. at the University. Genial and hustling George has resigned to become a member of the staff at the Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York, of which Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick is pastor. His special responsibility will be the management of the business aspects of the new religious centre which the church is building and the new work which the church is undertaking on Riverside Drive. George has truly achieved a notable success in managing all of the student activities which centre in Rockefeller Hall, and under his leadership deficits have ceased for both the Union and the Christian Association and the effectiveness of each student organization in his charge has greatly increased. We hate to see him go, but we wish him all success and pleasure in his new place.

Rev. Earl H. Tomlin is pastor of the Homewood Baptist Church, Homewood ave. and Bennett st., Pittsburgh, Pa. His home address is 6913 McPherson Blvd., Pittsburgh.

Freddie Lathrop has finished seven years of medical training, the last part of which was spent at the hospital of the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, and the first of this month commenced practice in pediatrics in Plainfield, N. J.

Douglas Holyoke is now on the managerial staff of the sales department, Caterpillar Tractor Co., San Leandro, Cal. His home address is 383 Central ave., Alameda, Cal.

Richmond Watson, who is with the H. K. McCann Company, advertising, has shifted his scene of activities to the Pacific Coast, where he is located at 806 Skinner bldg., Seattle, Wash.

R. Bruce Lindsay, instructor in the Department of Physics at Yale University, has been promoted to the rank of assistant professor. Bruce has been a member of the Yale Faculty since 1923.

1921

H. E. MacCombie was ordained as a Baptist minister at the First Baptist Church, Stoughton, Mass., on June 9. The ordination sermon was preached by the Rev. B. T. Livingston '97. "Mac" has two children, a boy and a girl, his wife having been Amy Campbell, a member of the class of '23 at the Women's College.

1922

Bob Burgh is a salesman with the National Cash Register Co., with his business address at 14 High st., Boston, Mass. Bob reports that Robert, Jr., is 14 months old and will soon be able to give the "Long Brown."

1923

K. K. Gregory, who was due to receive his M. D. at Harvard Medical School as this issue was on its way to press, will be medical officer this summer at Camp Yawgoog, the summer encampment of the Greater Providence Council, Boy Scouts of America.

1924

Gordon Bigelow, in charge of young people's work at the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia, had the honor of being selected as the chairman of the youth rally held last month in connection with the North Baptist Convention in Chicago. Gordon also spoke on the topic, "Youth and the Christian Ministry."

"Want" Babcock has ended his long fight against ill health. He died in Providence on June 16, 1927, the day after he had attended Commencement exercises as well as the reunion of the class on Tuesday, June 14. He had been in California during the winter, coming home in March feeling somewhat improved but by no means up to normal. He was born Frederick Wanton Babcock in Providence on Oct. 24, 1902, the son of the late Frederick W. and K Augusta (Clarke) Babcock. He was a lineal descendant of Governor Wanton, one of the Colonial Governors of Rhode Island. He came to Brown from Hope Street High School, was a member of the Herald staff and active in the Dramatic Society during his undergraduate days. Since graduation he had done some writing and had hopes of developing into a novelist. But ill health prevented him from carrying on any serious or consecutive work. His mother is his only survivor, and to her in her loss goes the sincere sympathy of the class.

C. C. Johnson tells us that his new address is Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Inc., 48-50 Winthrop st., Hartford, Conn.

Carleton Staples has left the Brown Club and is now getting his mail at Anderson, S. C., Box 497.

Jack Hurst writes in his very legible hand: "My present address is 61 West 73rd st., New York."

Len Vollbracht is on the staff of the City Assessor, Detroit, Mich., and is doing appraisal work in connection with taxation. "Interesting and not altogether undesirable," he says. Incidentally, Len, who played football in college, has hopes of getting into the coaching game, to which he has given considerable study. His business address is 202 City Hall, Detroit.

Pratt Tobey, who has been an assistant in English on College Hill during the past academic year, will join the faculty of Mercersburg Academy next fall as an instructor in English.

Elliott Cruise is an assistant engineer with the New York Telephone Co., and is living at present at the Y. M. C. A., Orange, N. J.

S. Carson Mitchell, who left college in his Freshman year, received the degree of B. B. A. at the University of Washington last March and is now auditor with the Pacific Fruit and Produce Co., Seattle, Wash. His home address is 4520 21st ave., N. E., Seattle.

Some time ago radical changes in the Department of English were announced. Professor Lindsay Todd Damon succeeds Professor Walter Cochrane Bronson as head of the department.

Professor C. W. Brown of the Department of Geology has announced changes in his department for the next academic year. Dr. M. E. Hurst, a graduate of M. I. T., class of 1922, will become instructor in mineralogy and topography, succeeding Lloyd Fisher, who is going to the Johns Hopkins University to study for his Ph.D. degree. Dr. Hurst has taught at M. I. T. and at Ohio State. He is a native of Australia. E. K. Gedney '26 has been reappointed Peirce Fellow in geology and an assistant. A. B. Cleaves '27 will be a graduate assistant.

The Women's College

Editor Brown Alumni Monthly:

I wish to commend most heartily your stand re including in the magazine items from the Women's College. The Women's College is an integral part of the University and no chronicle is complete without this Department being included.

In considering the proposed change for Commencement, it appears that one of the features of the present arrangement, i. e., Alumni Day with the class reunions and the trip down the Bay, is omitted. This seems to me to be regrettable, and it is a question in my mind whether this will not result in shortening the time spent at reunions with a resulting loss in fellowship and corresponding loss of contact and interest in the University.

How Much Will It Cost to Send YOUR Boy to Brown?

We believe that very few alumni realize how college costs have soared. The figures have been quite a revelation to the few who have investigated. We recently interviewed several undergraduates of average means and found that their expenses have been about as above. Some were higher but few could show a lower figure.

The Puritan Childs Educational Fund is the best means we know of for spreading the cost of a college education over the years when the child is growing up. Let us tell you more about it as it relates to your own particular need.
