In Such An Hour As This

"He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root: Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit. ISAIAH 27:6

In such an hour as this, when tyranny
Had thought to stifle, with an arrogant hand,
The consciences of men, that dauntless band
Of our forefathers dared an unknown sea,
Uncharted shores, forswore nativity,
For freedom's sake. Here, in a hostile land,
They raised their altars; fearless, made their stand;
And trusted God, in their extremity.

He did not fail them! For He is a God
Of freedom; and would have His children free.
Today---this land, which they in exile trod,
Lifts high her shining towers from sea to sea;
And countless throats, from this beloved fertile sod,
Pour forth their hymns and prayers for liberty!

It is surprising how quickly bigotry can develop in the minds of men. It is also surprising how readily some people and groups can accuse others of bigotry simply because they seek by legitimate means to hold to principles they regard as infinitely precious...

The preservation of religious freedom requires that the state (ie: government) should not be identified with any particular religion or religions...nor become a persecuting power. A hated government cannot last.

Today: Too often modern man fails to understand..."That material provision gives people their existence as creatures; but, freedom marks their existence as men." LET FREEDOM RING!
