been drawn directly into this maelstrom because Mr. LaHaye includes in his book 29 passages from my book, The Philosophy of Humanism, to show the horrors of Humanism.

Actually, the Humanists have regrettably remained a small minority with only about 3,000 members in their main organization, the American Humanist Association. Of course there are many Humanists in the United States outside of the AHA, but Mr. LaHaye wildly exaggerates their influence and power. We can imagine President Reagan's loud laugh if told that Humanism "has taken over our government."

The self-righteous Moral Majority, which we are glad to know is only a minority, greatly needs to improve its own morals in its crude denunciations of organizations and individuals. In its malicious propaganda against everything liberal it unceasingly violates Christian values of truth and tolerance. A good case in point is the absurd claim by Dan Fore, the Moral Majority's man in New York City, that the American Civil Liberties Union is a "Communist front." Of course, the ACLU would defend the civil liberties of the Moral Majority.

I believe that a strong reaction is setting in against the Moral Majority, as it finally did against Senator Joseph McCarthy and his paranoid campaign against alleged Communists and subversives. The Humanists have come to think that the Moral Majority's attacks against them have strengthened their cause by giving wide publicity to Humanism. During the past few months
