COVERING UP THE COMMUNISTS IN UNICEF

Each year the United Nations Children's Fund — UNICEF — seeks to raise millions of dollars through the use of the children of the United States at Halloween. Every conceivable radio, television, and public relations avenue that could be used by the United Nations has been employed to commend the UN, its program, to the children and the people of the nation. Every year Dr. Carl McIntire has published a tract opposing UNICEF's program because of the place it gives to the Communists in the direction of the program and in all the activities of the program, and because of the assistance that was given to Communist governments directly from the money collected by the children.

Previous UNICEF Tracts

In 1962, the title of the tract by Dr. McIntire was, "The Communists in UNICEF"; 1963, "Co-operation With Communists in UNICEF"; 1964, "The Place of Communists in UNICEF"; 1965, "How UNICEF Helps the Communist Cause"; and the 1966 title is, "Covering Up the Communists in UNICEF."

Thousands of these tracts have been distributed through the 20th Century Reformation Hour.

Two additional factors now enter the picture, which should concern the American people. The first is that one of the key employees of UNICEF, a Soviet spy, was caught in the act of espionage. Wide publicity was given to this in the public press in January, 1966.

An editorial from the Richmond, Va., News Leader, Saturday, January 15, 1966, was entitled, "Spy from UNICEF." It reads:

No one need be surprised that a Soviet employee of UNICEF has been caught red-handed trying to get critical missile parts out of the United States. Everyone knows that the UN functions, among other things, as a Soviet espionage unit in the U. S. J. Edgar Hoover has warned repeatedly that every Soviet citizen serving in a diplomatic function in this country is a potential spy. Or rather, Soviet personnel are all spies, even though all might not be active at the same time.

The story, revealed by the New York Journal-American, is that one Vadim Isakov, a procurement officer for UNICEF, tried to buy certain sophisticated instruments that measure changes in direction and velocity of missiles. The components manufacturer got suspicious when Isakov came in with a complete set of parts numbers for the instruments, which are not on sale to the public. Moreover, Isakov did not know any of the technical background on the parts. Obviously, the parts were not for UNICEF; the list had come right from the Soviet Union.

Through such instances, we get some inkling of the meaning of the police state. The Communists make no separation between private and state activity. No matter what a person's job, he also has the obligation to serve in the total police function. At home he must spy on his family and neighbors; abroad, he must spy on his hosts, whether he is a fancy fiddler, a ballet star, or a diplomat. Moreover, he must carry out acts of subversion if his superiors deem him trustworthy and capable.

Although the sponsors of UNICEF make a great hue and cry about feeding starving children—which no doubt UNICEF does—we are supposed to forget about the fact that in supporting UNICEF in Communist countries, we are constructively supporting a police apparatus bent on world domination. For whenever a Communist doles out milk paid for by the pennies of American children, he sees to it that Communist aims of propaganda are served thereby.

Moreover; as we see from the latest incident, we are also supporting an international network of double agents who use the phony humanitarian facade to gull the bleeding hearts of the world. The treat may make good propaganda, but the trick is that our children are made to support the spy from UNICEF.

The Washington Post in its story January 14, 1965, reported, "A New York Journal-American article said Isakov had offered a $9000 down payment to the firm, but officials refused on FBI advice."

Documentation From Official Sources

The documentation that Dr. McIntire has used through the years has come from the official reports and the publications of UNICEF itself. These reports indicate that Communists, representatives of the Communist Government, are on the executive board of UNICEF and also the administrative staff of UNICEF. In Communist countries where the UNICEF assistants did distribute it, it is entirely in the hands of the Communists, just as a Communist was active in the affairs of UNICEF in the United States, so in the world-
