I believe 100 percent in abortion on demand. Yet if I had to choose myself, I'd be in a horrible dilemma. The horror stories which suggest that the doctors who perform abortion are killers and that the mothers are heartless, do have an effect; they can only be countered by militant argument and action.

Just because we say we want abortion on demand, doesn't mean we make the demand easily. We often don't. We've seen the photos of mangled foetuses displayed by "Right to Life," and I would hesitate before meeting obscenity with obscenity. But try to imagine how the body of a woman looks after a backstreet abortion which has killed her.

We can end the agony by fighting against the anti-woman forces and for safe, legal abortion regardless of ability to pay.
