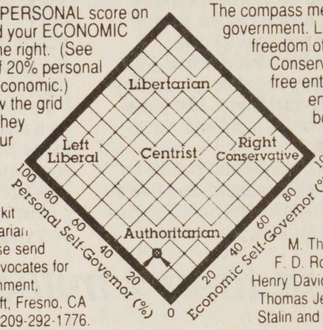
How to use the Self-Government Compass

Mark your PERSONAL score on the left and your ECONOMIC score on the right. (See example of 20% personal and 10% economic.) Then follow the grid lines until they meet at your political identity!



The compass measures self-government. Liberals value freedom of expression. Conservatives value free enterprise. Libertarians value both. Authoritarians are against both.

Winning others to liberty hasn't been easy. Until now.

Sometimes you wish you could wave a wand at people ... push a button ... and have them instantly see the light.

Here's the next best thing. Self-Government: An Idea Whose Time Has Come ... Again is turning non-libertarians into libertarians.

Starring Marshall Fritz, this high quality video explains the ideas of liberty clearly, succinctly, honestly. The viewer finds himself nodding his head, his excitement rising: This makes sense!

Short enough to be viewed in one sitting, the video answers these crucial questions:
- Are libertarian ideas based on decent principles, the ones your Mom and Dad taught you?
- Where do libertarians fit on the political map — left-wing, right-wing, or do we need a better map?
- How do people benefit when libertarian ideas are adopted? Will you be better off? Will the poor?
- Where is the evidence that these ideas are practical? Is there proof these ideas work in the real world?

Lend this video to friends. Or invite folks over for an "evening of ideas" and show it. You can count on a spontaneous and animated discussion.

Trish Coffey, a professional video producer in Beaverton, Ore., told of her initial experience lending the Self-Government tape:

"This tape really works! I have loaned it ten times, and eight more people consider themselves libertarians. ...

"A lady contacted me to sell insurance, and I offered to loan her the video. She took it home and started to watch it. Her husband walked in and joined her. A few days later they had friends over, and much to his wife's surprise, he put the tape on. Now both couples have requested permission to keep the tapes another few days, to show them to a third couple.

"That's not the end of the story! The insurance lady called on the video lab owner (where I do editing) and got talking about libertarian ideas. He had already seen the tape and was eager to talk. They were avidly trying to think of ways to help this movement gain momentum ... When she talks with me now her voice is alive with excitement. I'm no longer just a client to her, but also a close friend.

"A friend borrowed the tape to take to a family reunion in Florida. They showed it to the whole family, and the young people excitedly discussed the issues for the rest of the weekend.

"This tape is powerful. People borrow it willingly. And there's a bonus: These friendships have a new intimacy. They know we are both on the same side, and it's the just, moral, healthy side."

You, too, will want to lend this video to friends, relatives and acquaintances. You'll enjoy watching it yourself — it rekindles the excitement we all felt when we first grasped the beauty and logic of self-government.
