JOINT STATE-AID MESSAGE

AUG 11 5 00 PM '69

FROM : Department of State

DATE:

SUBJECT : Proceedings of State-AID Conference on American Direct Investment in the Developing Countries, May 2, 1969

REF :

Attached is a copy of the highlights and edited proceedings of discussions of policy issues and options in regard to American direct investment in developing countries by a group of academic and business authorities and senior Government officials at a May 2, 1969 conference which was sponsored jointly by the State Department and AID. Raymond Vernon of Harvard's Graduate Business School chaired the conference and presented an overview of the role and problems of US direct investment. Charles Kindleberger of M.I.T. introduced the discussion of policy issues and options. Stefan Robock of Columbia discussed the economic impact of US direct investment; Theodore Geiger of the National Planning Association reviewed the socio-political implications; and Jack Baranson of the World Bank covered the role of private investment in the transfer of technology.

Other outside participants included: Robert Asher of Brookings, Jack N. Behrman of North Carolina University, Alfonse de Rosso of Standard Oil of N.J., William Kling of Uniroyal Corp., John R. Kirkpatrick of E.B.S. Management Consultants, Rev. Philip Land of the Gregorian University, Walter Lingle of Procter and Gamble, Edward Littlejohn of Charles Pfizer & Co., John Pershing of Chase International, Alan Strout of Brookings and Don Wallace of Georgetown Law School.

We believe the proceedings will be of particular interest to Embassy economic officers and AID program and capital project officers.

JOINT STATE-AID MESSAGE

AUG 11 5 00 PM '69

FROM : Department of State

DATE:

SUBJECT : Proceedings of State-AID Conference on American Direct Investment in the Developing Countries, May 2, 1969

REF :

Attached is a copy of the highlights and edited proceedings of discussions of policy issues and options in regard to American direct investment in developing countries by a group of academic and business authorities and senior Government officials at a May 2, 1969 conference which was sponsored jointly by the State Department and AID. Raymond Vernon of Harvard's Graduate Business School chaired the conference and presented an overview of the role and problems of US direct investment. Charles Kindleberger of M.I.T. introduced the discussion of policy issues and options. Stefan Robock of Columbia discussed the economic impact of US direct investment; Theodore Geiger of the National Planning Association reviewed the socio-political implications; and Jack Baranson of the World Bank covered the role of private investment in the transfer of technology.

Other outside participants included: Robert Asher of Brookings, Jack N. Behrman of North Carolina University, Alfonse de Rosso of Standard Oil of N.J., William Kling of Uniroyal Corp., John R. Kirkpatrick of E.B.S. Management Consultants, Rev. Philip Land of the Gregorian University, Walter Lingle of Procter and Gamble, Edward Littlejohn of Charles Pfizer & Co., John Pershing of Chase International, Alan Strout of Brookings and Don Wallace of Georgetown Law School.

We believe the proceedings will be of particular interest to Embassy economic officers and AID program and capital project officers.

Raymond Vernon of Harvard's Graduate Business School chaired the conference and presented an overview of the role and problems of US direct investment. Charles Kindleberger of M.I.T. introduced the discussion of policy issues and options. Stefan Robock of Columbia discussed the economic impact of US direct investment; Theodore Geiger of the National Planning Association reviewed the socio-political implications; and Jack Baranson of the World Bank covered the role of private investment in the transfer of technology.

Other outside participants included: Robert Asher of Brookings, Jack N. Behrman of North Carolina University, Alfonse de Rosso of Standard Oil of N.J., William Kling of Uniroyal Corp., John R. Kirkpatrick of E.B.S. Management Consultants, Rev. Philip Land of the Gregorian University, Walter Lingle of Procter and Gamble, Edward Littlejohn of Charles Pfizer & Co., John Pershing of Chase International, Alan Strout of Brookings and Don Wallace of Georgetown Law School.

We believe the proceedings will be of particular interest to Embassy economic officers and AID program and capital project officers.

Charles Kindleberger of M.I.T. introduced the discussion of policy issues and options. Stefan Robock of Columbia discussed the economic impact of US direct investment; Theodore Geiger of the National Planning Association reviewed the socio-political implications; and Jack Baranson of the World Bank covered the role of private investment in the transfer of technology.

Other outside participants included: Robert Asher of Brookings, Jack N. Behrman of North Carolina University, Alfonse de Rosso of Standard Oil of N.J., William Kling of Uniroyal Corp., John R. Kirkpatrick of E.B.S. Management Consultants, Rev. Philip Land of the Gregorian University, Walter Lingle of Procter and Gamble, Edward Littlejohn of Charles Pfizer & Co., John Pershing of Chase International, Alan Strout of Brookings and Don Wallace of Georgetown Law School.

We believe the proceedings will be of particular interest to Embassy economic officers and AID program and capital project officers.

Charles Kindleberger of M.I.T. introduced the discussion of policy issues and options. Stefan Robock of Columbia discussed the economic impact of US direct investment; Theodore Geiger of the National Planning Association reviewed the socio-political implications; and Jack Baranson of the World Bank covered the role of private investment in the transfer of technology.

Other outside participants included: Robert Asher of Brookings, Jack N. Behrman of North Carolina University, Alfonse de Rosso of Standard Oil of N.J., William Kling of Uniroyal Corp., John R. Kirkpatrick of E.B.S. Management Consultants, Rev. Philip Land of the Gregorian University, Walter Lingle of Procter and Gamble, Edward Littlejohn of Charles Pfizer & Co., John Pershing of Chase International, Alan Strout of Brookings and Don Wallace of Georgetown Law School.

We believe the proceedings will be of particular interest to Embassy economic officers and AID program and capital project officers.
