

6. Fluoridation is completely illogical and expensive to boot. Why treat all users of a domestic water supply when only one-tenth of one per cent of the water will be consumed by the 12 per cent who might possibly benefit? And why expose all citizens to a potentially serious hazard by forcing them to drink medicated water? In addition, it is admitted that children in rural areas will not receive the doubtful benefits. How much more logical it would be for those wishing to use this toxic chemical to add a known daily dose of chemically pure sodium fluoride to milk or water by means of a tablet or drops on the prescription of a physician or dentist - and how much cheaper!
7. Moreover, statistics cited to prove a marked reduction in dental caries in those children consuming artificially fluoridated water are both contradictory and unconvincing.
8. No satisfactory studies are available to prove lack of toxicity for the aged, the chronically ill, the malnourished, and the allergic members of the population.
9. Cases of serious illness resulting from the consumption of water fluoridated at the recommended concentration are now being reported. Allergic individuals, as might be expected, seem particularly susceptible. Two fatal cases exhibiting marked generalized fluorosis have been carefully studied and reported. They drank naturally fluoridated water not far above the advocated level.
10. The fact that those opposed to fluoridation not only have great difficulty in reporting their observations, but in addition are subjected to unfair assaults upon their personal integrity and professional standing, should be enough to make every physician and dentist resolve to learn all the facts and to question the motives and tactics of those advocating fluoridation.

Finally, citizens of every community should seriously question the advisability of permitting themselves and their children to serve as human guinea pigs for an experiment of dubious value and safety - particularly when avoidance of sugar and highly processed bread and cereals plus the consumption of an optimum diet will control dental caries in most instances and vastly improve the general health as well!
