

YOUR GIFT WILL ECHO ACROSS THE GENERATIONS

America's 30 tribal colleges serve some of the nation's poorest, most isolated communities. With little opportunity, a tribal college education is one of the only ways to escape cycles of poverty, unemployment, substance abuse and despair.

Today, over 25,000 Native American students overcome enormous financial and geographic obstacles to seize that opportunity. They range in age from 17 to 70. Most are women. And 85% live at or below the poverty level.

With even the modest cost of tribal college tuition beyond the reach of most students, scholarships from the American Indian College Fund are essential.

Your gift will go a long way -- enabling another student to attend college, and empowering them and their communities to build a better future for all of Native America.
