

War in Vietnam

"Cardinal Spellman, who is proclaimed by his church to be the vicar of the Armed Forces of the United States, meanwhile was making regular trips to Vietnam where he encouraged the Americans there in the Armed Services by telling them they were 'soldiers for christ' in Vietnam. In speeches in the United States he characterized the nationalist Vietnamese as 'godless goons of communism.' Drew Pearson pointed out, finally, that 'in some diplomatic and political circles, the war in Vietnam is called "Spellman's War." ' Senator Wayne Morse (Dem.-Oregon) caustically stated that 'It will come as a surprise to the American people that our soldiers have enlisted in the war as soldiers of christ.' But this aspect of the war was little reported."

Sex Mythology

"Reverse the position of the triple deities asher, anu, hea and we have the figure of the ancient 'tau'  of the christians, Greeks, and ancient Hebrews — not of the modern Hebrews. It is one of the oldest conventional forms of the cross. It is also met with in Gallic, Oscan, Arcadian, Etruscan, original Egyptian, Phoenician, Ethiopic and Pelasgian. The Ethiopic form of the 'tau' is this , the exact prototype and image of the cross; or, rather, to state the fact in order of merit and position in time, the cross is made in the exact image of the Ethiopic 'tau.' . . .

Thus we find the cross is the Ethiopic and ancient Hebrew 'tau' . The  is the triad, the triad is asher, anu, and hea — the male genitals deified — the genitals are pudenda, pudenda means shame or immodest, and so we arrive at the unavoidable conclusion that the cross is of sexual origin and purely masculine. It is the sign of a man-god."
