

protect populations of the "forgotten whales" -- small whales, dolphins, and porpoises, which were not covered by the whaling ban and continue to be slaughtered by the tens of thousands.

With your support ... WWF will fight to designate the Antarctic a world preserve. That means calling a halt to Japan's annual "scientific" annihilation of 300 minke whales in Antarctic waters.

Make no mistake. The threat to renew the commercial killing of the world's great whales is both real and imminent.

Please. Help World Wildlife Fund tell the International Whaling Commission ... help us tell the world whaling nations ... that now is NOT the time to return to the mass slaughter of whales!

Again, you can help send that message loud and clear by taking these two steps at once:

1. Sign the enclosed petitions to the Ambassadors of Japan, Iceland, and Norway.
2. Return these petitions with your tax-deductible check for $25, $50, $100 or more in the envelope enclosed.

For the sake of our planet's remaining whales, please act today.

Sincerely,

Kathryn S. Fuller

P.S. Next time I write you I'll be sending the complimentary set of note cards I mentioned above. These cards come with thanks for your past support and with fervent hope that you'll help WWF say an emphatic "No!" to the call for renewed commercial whaling.
