HELP CRUSH OUT LYNCHING

The Anti-Lynching Committee of the N. A. A. C. P. earnestly appeals for contributions to its Anti-Lynching Fund—no matter how little, or much—to back President Wilson's crusade against lynching—the monster disloyalty to America.

"I say plainly that every American who takes part in the action of a mob or gives any sort of countenance is no true son of this great democracy, but its betrayer, and does more to discredit her by that single disloyalty to her standards of law and right than the words of her statesmen or sacrifices of her heroic soldiers in the trenches can do to make a suffering people believe in her, their savior."

—from President Wilson's Lynching and Mob Violence Pronouncement.

President Wilson's appeal must be heeded. The suppression of lynching has become a test of national patriotism. Lynching persists because those who practice it believe in it more strongly than the opponents of lynching believe in "ordered law and humane justice."

Eight Negroes were lynched in the ten weeks following the President's pronouncement. No one was arrested or put on trial because of these lynchings.

Every lynching must be investigated. The facts must be brought home to the people of America. Governors must be appealed to in each specific case to uphold the law. (The punishment of lynchers has been held to be an affair of local authorities in the States.) The pressure of national condemnation must be brought to bear upon local authorities everywhere. Public opinion must be aroused until it becomes a vital and compelling force. The public conscience must be stimulated to decisive action. When aroused, this awakened conscience must be organized, vitalized and centred upon effective means of action.

We appeal for a fund of $10,000. Unless you do your share we shall not get it. Send check, money order, or currency to

Peace

The nightmare is over. The world awakes. The long, horrible years of dreadful night are passed. Behold the sun! We have dreamed. Frightfully have we dreamed unimagined, unforgettable things—all lashed with blood and tears. Bound and damned we writhed and could not stir. The contortions of our hated souls stifled our hunted bodies. We were cold and numb and deaf and blind, and yet the air was visioned with the angels of Hell; the earth was a vast groan; the sea was a festering sore, and we were flame.

And now suddenly we awake! It is done. We are sane. We are alive. Behold the Heavens and its stars; and this blood,—this warm and dripping blood from our mad self-laceration—What of it? Can we not staunch it? Will we not? Hail, then, Holy Christmas time, Nineteen Hundred and Eighteen Years after the Birth, and five since the last Crucifixion.

"On Earth, Peace, Good Will Toward Men."

The Flight into Egypt

You remember, do you not?—the beautiful Bible story in the simple words of Matthew, telling of the departure of the Three Wise Men:

"And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

"When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt:

"And was there until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son."

They were poor, humble, ignorant people,—albeit the blood of kings burned in their veins. They were ragged and unkempt and black. Long years they had plodded faithfully to earn their daily bread in sweat and pain; then one night, beneath the stars, came Three Strangers, crying: "Where is He that is Born?" The mother lifted Him up tenderly and they gave him gifts,—Candy and a Fairy-tale and a piece of Gold.

Joseph and Mary looked at the gold-piece in amazement. Never had they seen so much money before, and as they looked they dreamed. Egypt! the Land of Freedom; Egypt! the Haven of the Oppressed; Egypt! where there was Learning and Wages and Honor. While here? Here there brooded a Shadow and a Fear.

Stealthily they arose by night and took the old lantern and walked and ran till they crossed the river. The dawn found them wet and weary, crouching in the moss-swept underbrush of the swamp; but their faces were set North—that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet,—that the fairy-tale might come true.
IN FRANCE
October 9, 1918.

Dear Dr. Du Bois:

The ties of home assume a new meaning to us here in France, and when the guns rumble, as they do continuously, not far off, The Crisis and the many friends whom it brings to mind seem very near and dear. I am now commanding officer of a detached battalion in the zone of the advance, with all the responsibilities of a quasi independent command. My overlord is miles away, and in this lonely camp in the woods, where there is no "life" outside of work, I am monarch of all I survey. My old regiment is not far off, and it seems hard to believe that many of my old comrades in it will never see America again. Men from the colored regiments come within my orbit, too, every now and then, and everywhere I hear splendid reports of their labors and fine deeds.

The other day I made Sunday afternoon a holiday, and paid my first visit to the largest city in this section. The ride there through country not unlike my own Dutchess was most interesting, and from the top of the last hill I could see the sorely tried city in a semi-circle of the hills which it in part climbed. It has been bombed and bombarded for years, and a large part of the civil population was evacuated last winter. Everywhere I saw signs of its sufferings. I sought out the Faculty of Letters (it is a University city) in the hope of finding some scholar whom I might know. But I found only the old concierge, who told me that there had been no professors, students, or studies since the city was evacuated. She showed me the great hall of the University, and I mounted the rostrum and made my first address in French. My only audience was the concierge, who complimented me on my eloquence and assured me that I spoke excellent French. But though the French was really very bad, and the audience limited, I delivered my message in my most resonant voice, which echoed through the empty chamber, sad in its shattered ceiling and its debris covered floor. I began with the thought that one could love France very dearly without speaking perfect French, just as one could love God without speaking the language of the angels. I ended by tipping my audience and leaving the University. At the corner I bought a paper, and this startling headline stared me in the face: L'ENNEMI DEMANDE L'ARMISTICE. When I reached home (most of the way in the dark without lights) and stood outside my quarters, the guns seemed as loud as ever, even louder, and I asked myself the oft asked question, "Peace? Peace?"

You may say for me to all my friends that colored America has more than justified the hopes of those who have always believed in it, and more than earned all that we have demanded for it. I take off my hat to the courage and devoted patriotism of black men in this war.

Faithfully yours,
J. E. Spingarn.

The French Republic,
Montmorillon, Vienne,
August 12, 1918.

Office of the Mayor of Montmorillon
(Vienne)

My dear General: Yesterday, on returning home, I found your card informing me of your departure, and deeply regret having lost the opportunity of preferring a farewell handshake and of reiterating my regrets at your departure from our city.

Personally I shall cherish the happiest recollections of your stay, and the entire population is unanimous in reaching the conclusion that the attitude and behavior of your soldiers has been above reproach. They have earned our high regard by their discipline and their faultless behavior, and have likewise endeared themselves to us by their good nature and kindliness toward all. The residents of Montmorillon are of one accord in saying the best that can be said of them, in regretting their departure, and are not a little surprised that colored troops have shown that they not only equal white troops, but even surpass them.

Believe me, my dear General,
Sincerely and respectfully yours,
G. de Font Reaulx,
Assistant Mayor.

To the Commanding General, 167th Field Artillery Brigade, La Courtine, Crouse.

TERCENTENARY

The husband of Pocahontas wrote in 1619: “About the last of August came a Dutch man of warre that sold us twenty Negars.” From this beginning sprang the present twelve million Americans of Negro descent.

Next August will mark the Three Hundredth Anniversary of this vast transplantation of a race, which ranks easily as one of the most significant movements of mankind. Such an event can hardly be “celebrated,” for it connoted too much of misery and human sorrow. On the other hand, it is too stern and meaningful a happening to be forgotten. For this reason, a group of thirty-three colored men met in New York, October 19, 1918, at the invitation of a committee appointed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

They determined to inaugurate “A Solemn Memorial of the Tercentenary of the Transplanting of the Negro race to the United States.” In order, however, to give all sections and interests of the Negro race adequate voice and representation in these plans, this committee set about choosing a Committee of “Three Hundred and More,” in whose hands the Memorial will take final shape. This Committee is now being chosen and will meet in New York early in January, 1919.

WAR HISTORY

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has appropriated funds and commissioned the Director of Publications and Research to collect the data and compile a history of the Negro in the Great War. Dr. DuBois has invited a number of Negro scholars, soldiers and officials to form an Editorial Board, which will be able to issue an authentic, scientific and definitive history of our part in this war.

The personnel of this board will be announced later. Meantime, we want the active co-operation of every person who can and will help. We want facts, letters and documents, narratives and clippings. Let us all unite to make the record complete. Correspondence may be directed to this office.

THE BALLOT

We hail as prophetic the swansong of Senator Thomas William Hardwick, of Georgia. He entered Congress in 1903, on a platform calling for the repeal of the Fifteenth Amendment. He leaves the Senate in 1919, at the special request of President Wilson, on account of his disloyalty,—not simply to his party leader and his country, but to the foundation principles of democratic government.

He said in helping to defeat Woman's Suffrage:

"What will be the result, when tens of thousands, yes, hundreds of thousands, of Negroes come home from this war with a record of honorable military service? I can conceive that a new agitation may arise as strong and bitter as the agitation for Negro suffrage which swept the North after the Civil war. I can see that this agitation will have a strong basis of right to the minds of people who do not understand the white man's burden as it is borne in the South."

That the number of people who are longer willing to view with understanding minds the present suffrage conditions in the South will diminish and dwindle away is the chief and compelling reason back of the loyalty of the Negro race in the war. Now that war is over, we have but one word and one thought—the Ballot.

We want that ballot safeguarded by every reasonable and decent limitation, impartially applied; but it can no longer be limited by race and sex.

In the great new day of coming Reconstruction we demand:

1. A vote for every adult American who can read and write.
2. Schools where every American child must learn to read and write.

After the record of 350,000 black men in the World War, is there any American, black or white, who can oppose this program? If so, we have but to put to him and Hardwick, in parallel columns, the words of Woodrow Wilson in defense of Woman's Suffrage and our own paraphrase in defense of Negro Suffrage:

The President said:

Are we alone to ask and take the utmost that our women can give — service and sacrifice of every kind — and still say we do not see what title that gives them to stand by our sides in the guidance of the affairs of our nation and ours? We have made partners of the women in this war. Shall we admit them only to a partnership of suffering and sacrifice and toil, and not to a partnership of privilege and right?

The Crisis says:

Are we alone to ask and take the utmost that our black fellow citizens can give — service and sacrifice of every kind — and still say we do not see what title that gives them to stand by our sides in the guidance of the affairs of their nation and ours? We have made partners of the Negroes in this war. Shall we admit them only to a partnership of suffering and sacrifice and toil, and not to a partnership of privilege and right?

STEVE

He was a lank puppy when he came—long, and dull gold on his crinkly hair, furtive and frightened, but his eyes were the eyes of the Crucified Christ. The Girl took him in and plead for him—fed him when she thought of it and overfed him after she forgot. He was wild with the joy of a home and bounded in shooting leaps across the meadows. The Woman, who was wiser than we and knew that dogs are more than human, looked on him coldly at first, for she had loved dogs before, and love is a terrible thing.

Once he was lost and I and the Girl sought him as the sun died in the west, sought him east and west and north—calling and whistling—till at last he came darting like an arrow out of the unknown dark to leap and fawn upon us and bark triumphantly. Once he was stolen, but after two nights he crept back to us, dirty and bedraggled, with the accusing rope tied around him. Ah! but we were glad, and to celebrate we bought a collar and set his name brightly upon it.

Then of a certain Sunday morning catastrophe threatened us—two Russians stood without the gate and said, "It is our dog," and "Larrabee!" they called and he went, wagging his tail. But the Woman came quietly to the door and said, "Steve!" and he leapt back in joy and wriggled on her and kissed her. Then there was parleying and tales of his beautiful wolf-hound mother and — "But will you take him?" asked the Woman, her voice soft with fear. The Russian wife patted him tenderly and said, "No, we go back to Russia, now that Revolution has brought Freedom, and leave him with you, for he loves you and you are kind." So then the Girl left her hiding and her tears and clasped her treasure, and the Russians went back—Great God! to what?

And the dog waxed strong and mighty, golden and beautiful. Men feared his very sight, and his seldom bark was a forest of sound; but he loved the Woman with an endless love—following her every footstep, harkening to her every word, guarding her every movement. The Girl he liked next; and me he tolerated good-naturedly. To our guests he was studiously polite, with the grave courtesy of the greatly born; to all children he was humble servant—but the Woman was God!

Then came the end. After two years of delights, after the wonder of a new home, after a summer by the sounding sea and winters in snows; after great dreamful naps and terrifying forays; after evenings of strange, weird music—after all this came slow steps and pain and the great frightened look of love in his eyes grew more and more wistful as he followed the Woman whither his palsied legs could not go. So they came and took him away and gave him strange medicine to eat, but the light died in his eyes and in mercy they put him to sleep. The Woman wept.

He is gone. Last night, meseems, he slept beside the werewolves who guard the angels of the throne of God. At dawn I saw his soul flashing in golden flame across the northern skies; and now at noon behold him, leaping with mighty bounds across the broad-steps of his fathers. I hear his great voice sounding above the chaos of the beautifulest dream of two centuries, when the Christ of the Bolsheviki cried in God-begotten faith to the boiling, angry, fear-mad waters, "Peace!" and there was no peace. I feel his golden fleece bristling with almighty curses and his fangs dripping blood above the Huns who would destroy, not alone the flesh, but the spirit of a great people. On, Steve, on! rend and tear and kill and die that the sweet, good earth may live again and that Russia may not die.

All this I see (for I am Seer), but in our deserted home the Girl is silent and the Woman weeps, while I? Oh, I, always, beneath the hand of fate, write—and write—and write.

"I AM CONVINCED myself that there is no more evil thing in this present world than Race Prejudice; none at all. I write deliberately—it is the worst single thing in life now. It justifies and holds together more baseness, cruelty and abomination than any other sort of error in the world."

H. G. WELLS,
At the turn of the road,
There'll be luck to share;
At the turn of the road,
Silver and gold and a dream to spare,
And a host of sunny sweet days and fair,
And all that you wish for most out there,
At the turn of the road.

It wasn't Christmas Day, but it was Christmas in the heart of Mr. Jimps. There seemed never a time when there wasn't some sort of a smile on his wholesome brown face. Sometimes it was one of those right-up-from-the-heart smiles; sometimes just one of those sudden-willing smiles,—but always a smile.

Many a spring with violets and robins, many a summer with June and summer loveliness; many an autumn with symphonies in gold and brown; many a winter in snowy whiteness had all come and gone; but each had found Mr. Jimps contented in the little hut at the turn of the road.

Pedestrians of every type through many years had stopped to talk to this village character as they had passed and always had left him filled with a newer zeal and a keener happiness. Mr. Jimps possessed the great gift of human understanding and in his heart there lived nothing but a love for his fellowmen. There was in his kindly face an expression of his own ideals. The encouragement which he had so generously given to individuals all along the way was never to be measured.

On this particular afternoon it was snowing, seemingly with the one thought of preparedness for the Christmas Day, which was only two days distant. The old man sat nodding by an eastern window, pipe between his teeth, glasses tilted perilously on his nose, and an open book on his knee. Finally he aroused himself.

“Well, a-noddin' still and a-snowin' still. Fire all low and supper-time. Mr. Jimps, it looks like you had better oust yourself together smartly-soon.”

Busied with the reflections of the duties before him, he had not seen the stranger approaching the hut (struggling up the snow-covered road), and was a little startled when the rap came.

“Howdy, friend. Come in and warm yourself. I'll have a blaze sputtering in a slim few minutes. Are you in a hurry?”

“There is no hurry, my friend,” was the laconic reply.

Commonplaces were exchanged during the simple meal, and the stranger rose to go.

“I thank you, Mr. Jimps, for your generous hospitality to me, a stranger. Before leaving you, may I ask you a question?”

“As many as you wish, my friend.”

“Why do you always smile?”

“Because it is the easiest way, I find.”

“Perhaps it is better, but how find it easier? I find nothing in all the world worth smiling for.”

“What? With Christmas coming!—aye, even with Christmas gone!”

“Mr. Jimps, I have come to the place where the morning of another day is never welcome.”

“Sit down, friend. Let me tell you a story.”

Outside the flakes of snow descended noiselessly. Inside the hut there was a stillness. Tenderly Mr. Jimps laid down his pipe.

“There came a day into my life when I not only felt the meaning of your words but lived them. It seems to me that when an unhappiness comes, it comes only after some great happiness has just passed. A month before she had given me her promise of fidelity and love. I had been saving all along with just a hope,—saving for the little home our dreams had built. Young we were and happy. She was a woman wonderful,—the greatest gift God ever gave to man. I remember the night of her promise. There were cornflowers,—cornflowers of an unforgettable spring. We do not know what love is,—we know it just is. But the story!

“I had just finished high school two years before and had been doing all kinds of jobs in the little town, earning the dollars required to pay for the little farm where we were both to be just happy. One particular job was that of janitor in the largest bank. My mother and I lived alone. Returning one night from work I entered my home where officers of the law stood waiting to arrest me. Seven hundred dollars had been stolen from the bank. I was accused. Our home had been searched. My saving budget contained just two hundred dollars. The sentence was fifteen years. During that time my mother died, and the girl—her heart broke first and then she passed away. That was fifty years ago, my friend.

"For years I wandered only with a bitterness burning in my heart,—a bitterness toward man and his injustice. With all the heart-break, there never came a bitterness toward God. Still when birds sang, their songs seemed a mockery to me. The most beautiful of melodies seemed just like little lost tunes too tired to die. Even the sunshine hurt. I hated everything. My life seemed useless,—as useless as a Jimpson weed; so I called myself plain Mr. Jimps.

"Then twenty years after my Shadow, sick and heart-sore, I came to a stranger's cabin,—just as you have come to mine. It was two days before Christmas, and, yes,—it was snowing. While we were sitting there a gust of wind blew open the door and blew in the tiniest sprite of a lad, all snow covered, all smiles. 'Hey, Grandpa. It's a booster out there for sure, but I got your tobacco and the other stuff.' And then he noticed me and removed his cap. 'Evenin', sir.' I nodded and spoke to the child in my usual tone. 'Pardon me, mister, but didn't you forget to smile?'"

Mr. Jimps wiped a tear from the corner of his eye, rememberingly.

"Friend, from that hour on I have been always smiling. Why not? There were more heart breaks than my own. After all, it was a love-world; and there could come a peace from simply mending hearts. The friendly comfort of that old man and the radiant cheer from that child-heart, untouched, warmed the littleness of my own worn heart.

"After leaving the shelter of that home I wandered through the snow until I came to this poor hut on Christmas Day. From that day until this have I lived here, my friend—here at the turn of the road. My little garden furnishes my living and my friends of the wayside, who come, furnish me my pleasures. People have wondered how life could slip by me, leaving of its joys and sorrows scarcely a trace. It has been because I have been happy in trying to be happy in smiling at the shadows and the sunshine both. And so each day I sit here waiting patiently for the Joy I feel shall come someday to me—at the turn of the road."

The guest of the roadside hut rose falteringly. "Mr. Jimpfs, your words have been both a salvation and a happiness. Someday I shall return." The stranger smiled his farewell from the door as he trudged on his way.

Christmas morning came in a flurry of snowflakes. Mr. Jimpfs after clearing away the breakfast dishes spread out the numerous parcels, ribbon-wrapped and otherwise, that had come the day before. Few of his wayside acquaintances and friends from the village had forgotten his roadside cordiality. His old heart was indeed cheered as he viewed these tokens of appreciation.

The last package unopened lay at the end of the table. It was a copy of Henry Van Dyke's story of "The Other Wise Man." On the flyleaf was this inscription: "To him, who in his kindly way opened forever the heart of a stranger of yesterday."

Mr. Jimpfs smiled understandingly as he turned the pages. A few hours later he looked up from his new book and through the eastern window. A figure was plodding faithfully through the snow. The old man opened the door and looked out.

"Hey! over there," called a fresh young voice. "The turn of this old road has got me fussed some more! Know any old guy around here by the name of Jimps?"

"This is the offender. How best can I serve you, this Merry Christmas?"

"Merry Christmas, yourself—here's a special. I've been tracking around here an hour or two. Oh, no, thanks—must be moving on."

The envelope slid to the floor as Mr. Jimpfs held shakingly the letter from the old attorney's son.

Chelsea, Virginia, December 17, 1916.

James Avery—

Dear Friend:—

For ten years we have sought vainly to locate you. The thief of fifty years ago confessed, exonerating you entirely. In the Citizens Savings Bank ten thousand dollars is accredited to your name,—a gift from the stockholders and the townspeople. This is not an effort to make amends—no amends can be made.
We beg you to return to your home and honor its citizens.

Very truly yours,

HOWARD KILTHROP, JR.

Mr. Jimp sat down before the fire. Two tears fell, one on the wrinkled brown hand, and one on the crumpled white linen sheet. Tenderly he smoothed out the letter and smiled.

"Fifty years! but it came—at the turn of the road."

A NEGRO WOMAN TO HER ADOPTED SOLDIER BOY

FLORENCE LEWIS BENTLEY

My dear Soldier:

The post-card telling of your safe arrival on the other side came to me this morning, and the great relief which I feel measures the anxiety I had concerning your safe transfer. A friend said to me, "If the welfare of this boy whom you have never seen effects you so greatly, how would it be if he were your real son?"

When I answered that I could not feel more keenly if you were, in fact, the child of my body, of course, there were arguments to show I was mistaken. But you and I can afford to smile at such misapprehension. We, who have established a real kinship of the spirit—whose souls have met in an union which transcends that of flesh and blood—we, two have a sweet knowledge not shared by many. Since our correspondence I have clearly realized that the travail of the body is not the keenest experience in producing life. The awakening of a young soul far transcends the material quickening so dear to the material mother. And I have seen your soul take life. This is our sweet secret now—but one of these days all men will know that spirit, not matter, is the true substance, and this very war, of which you are a part, is going to help along that day of clear vision. Such is my hope.

Our friend, on the very day of her return from Newport News, brought to me your last letter. You were very right not to send it by mail because, of course, much would have been censored.

I am very sorry that you had not left the country before you had heard of that terrible lynching, and of that humiliating order to the soldiers, in a western camp, to submit tamely to personal insult, from which the uniform of their country was powerless to protect them. You would be half a man if you did not feel the infamy of it all—if you did not feel the need to renew your grip upon your loyalty so sharply assailed by such dire happenings.

Now, my dear, dear boy, we have been all over this ground—have we not? And we have tried to place these American atrocities in their true relation to the Great World Upheaval. You say you read my letters all over again in order to quiet your thought and get a hold on yourself. I feel grateful for that. I send this one to emphasize all I have said, and to which you have assented. You do not "go over seas to risk your life in the defence of a country which crucifies your brothers and denies you the ordinary rights of citizenship." You go to help to protect from disaster the Idea for which this country stands—that Idea which, though maltreated and defaced by imperfect men, must ultimately be made manifest in all its glorious reality as Universal Freedom. Men call it Democracy, but it is really the Kingdom of Brotherhood whose basic law is Love.

Get away from personality as much as possible. Don't look on yourself merely as a Negro soldier, but see yourself a factor in a Magnificent Emprise, than which this old world has never known a greater. Enlarge the units of your thought. Cease thinking in persons, in races, in cities and countries. Think in worlds. Then you get hold of the Principle which underlies all this upheaval, and whose control reaches from little you and me up to the skies. It is only by seeing largely that you can act greatly.

After much thought I have come to the conclusion that the Negro soldier of America is the most heroic figure in this whole war. He must be super-man, for the endurance of mere man has a human limit. There are Negroes from other parts of the world doing tremendous things in Europe, and they with their white comrades are spurred on and strengthened by the admiration and loyal affection of their respective countrymen. It seems that the American Negro Soldier alone must do without this warm stimulus of a country’s undivided love. He must cut his way through to attainment, leaning on nothing but a sense of duty, the passionate loyalty of his own little race group, and a reliance on God. He gives magnificently and receives what seems a reluctant dole. Well, dear son, let us face that stern fact, for we know that out of such stuff God makes his Great Ones, and we also know that in the inevitable summing up of things that same impartial God bestows rewards—and also punishment.

Let me repeat what I have so often written, my dear soldier. Your courage and strength are unassailable as long as you keep your Vision. Heads up and eyes straight forward is required spiritually as well as physically in a true soldier. Let no happening distract you from the great thing to which you are called. When you have wiped out error in one shape, other forms of it will fade away. Such is the contagion of Good. Try to make those friends of yours get this higher view and you will be helping them to a greater happiness and a higher manhood.

Because you wanted it, I am sorry that I had no photograph to send you before you left, but after all “the painted semblance” is no loss, dear, if you carry my spirit with you. Etch upon your heart, my dear soldier, the ideas, the hopes, the aspirations and—yes—the warm love I have tried to convey to you, and you will have a picture of the real me which no accident of war or any other thing can ever take from you. We will meet some happy day, we both believe, but if you are to make the supreme sacrifice you will always live for me in your beautiful spiritual Reality. I will see you always as the gallant, brave, devoted soul who went—not because of draft or other compulsion—but willingly, knowingly and joyously to help free the world from Error. I will remember that in so doing he laid down his dear life, to rescue even those who “despitefully used him and persecuted” him. “Greater love hath no man than this,” and in this way, dear son of my heart, you would be following the Great Example.

I kiss your cheek,

Faithfully,

Mother.

WE WHO ARE DARK

WE who are dark
And know the lash
On bodies worn,
Insensate made
Through years of wrong;
That feel no more
The scourge, the whip—
We who are dark
And know the hurt
Of pitless scorn
On souls that live
And feel the dart
And thrust of wrong;
The greedy glance
Of sinful lust—
We who are dark
And know the urge
Of blinding rage
And fury red,
That eats and burns;
The ache of hands
Presssed on by hearts
On vengeance bent—
We’ve won your praise
That side by side
With those who taught
Us all our woes
We bravely march
Nor backward glance.
Not hesitant,
Nor slow, but with
Quickening tread
Old wrongs, old sores
Forgotten lie;
Brothers-in-arms,
As we march forth
To Victory,
Bearing aloft
To foreign lands
A freedom sweet
That’s not our own.

Routine is often, if not always, tiresome. It is much more stimulating to be able to escape the details of how it was done and to confine one's self to the results accomplished. But some one must attend to the details. Many well meant efforts fall by the wayside because details are neglected. The National Office of the N. A. A. C. P., dealing as it does with the affairs of a movement embracing now more than 150 branches, has its full share of detailed work which it would be burdensome to relate and perhaps uninteresting to read. There are the daily receipts of membership fees and Crisis subscriptions which must be entered in the books and proper receipts sent to the new members and subscribers. Cards must be made and filed in the proper alphabetical order by cities and states. It may be remarked in passing that there is no routine job which the National Office is more willing to undertake than the acknowledgment of membership fees and Crisis subscriptions.

Then there are reports and inquiries from the branches, clippings and newspapers to be read for information as to happenings the country over which affect the Association's work and the interests of colored people, requests for information from many sources, including the ubiquitous high school or college student who has an essay to write and inquires for the answer by return mail to a query about the work being done for the Negro in some particular field or for literature. Such inquiries, by the way, are particularly welcome, as the National Office wishes to increase the number of those who are curious about the concerns of colored people.

With gratifying regularity these days there come inquiries from the most remote corners of the country concerning the steps to be taken for the organization of a branch of the Association. Or the information is received, that the citizens (practically always colored citizens) of a certain locality have met and formed an organization which they wish to become a branch of the N. A. A. C. P. Perhaps Crisis readers may find it interesting to read a summary of a day's work at the National Office.

The Secretary has selected an actual day's happening, taking for the purpose a day towards the end of October, a day or two before this was written. A slight editorial license has been availed of in that not all the matters treated were actually completed on the day on which they were placed on the Secretary's calendar.

On the day before The Day, copies of Memphis, Tenn., papers of the twenty-fourth had been received from the Memphis branch. These papers contained an advertisement of the Memphis War Work Committee from which, and from what was said by the branch representative, it appeared that there was an intention to pass an ordinance applying compulsory work laws to women. The advertisement was headed "WARNING" and was a mixture of threat and appeal. It gave the impression that the city government "was passing" an ordinance by the terms of which all able-bodied persons between the ages of eighteen and sixty would be forced to work for an employer six days a week and to have constantly in his or her possession a work card certifying to their employment. Press stories of the same papers told of colored women being employed in delivering coal, as bootblacks in barber shops and in similar employments.

Night telegrams had been sent to the Committee, to the Mayor of Memphis and to the Secretary of Labor at Washington in regard to the matter. Copies of our telegrams, which protested against forced labor of women and against discriminatory application of such ordinances to colored women, had been telegraphed to the Associated Press representative at Memphis.
in order to secure local publicity. It seems at this writing that following a not unusual custom among certain southern papers no publicity was given to our telegrams nor the fact that they had been received, mentioned. An editorial in one paper was evidently called forth by their receipt, however.

On the day we have chosen to illustrate our office activities, press copy was prepared and mailed to a portion of our general mailing list. During the day a telegram was received from the Secretary of the Memphis War Work Committee stating that the Committee was working in harmony with local and federal authorities and with the approval of whites and Negroes, that its campaign was primarily against the loafer and was not discriminatory. A second telegram to the Committee was thereupon dispatched in which the Association said that "it was in accord with any campaign against the loafer, but points out that a campaign to induce women to accept such work as will enable men to engage in essential industry is an altogether different thing from a campaign to force the conscription of female labor; and that if good wages and good working conditions are offered for women's labor, we are certain that they will respond in such employments as are suitable for women, as are not humiliating and as are within their strength" and urged the Committee to set its face against the conscription of women.

(For completeness of our story we must anticipate a day or two to tell of the receipt of a letter from the Mayor assuring us that "no ordinance providing for work cards for women, white or colored, had been passed or was contemplated at this time.")

The day's mail brought a clipping from Florida, headed "Tampa Negro Women Living in Idleness; Work or be Jailed." Our correspondent explained that an investigation which he had made, through agents, disclosed the fact that some colored women who work "in service" had asked their employers for a raise of pay. Being denied it, they had quit their employment; whereupon they were the subjects of police action at the instigation of the employers.

During the day a letter was prepared to send to the President expressing the Association's concern lest, owing to a dereliction of duty on the part of any election commissions, colored soldiers in the training camps might be denied their right of franchise. This letter was sent the next day to President Wilson and has been acknowledged (October 31) by the President's secretary. A press story releasing the letter to the press a full day after the President would have received it was sent out to the press services, to forty-five daily papers within a radius of one day's mailing distance and to our regular colored press correspondents.

Previous to communicating by mail with the President the Secretary had spent a day in Washington, interviewing officials of the War Department regarding the procedure of voting at the training camps. The particular point of the Secretary's conferences with War Department officials, at which Archibald H. Grimké, of our Washington Branch, was present, was to see what assurances, if any, could be obtained that colored men, eligible to vote, would be afforded that opportunity. The Secretary of War had caused a general order to be issued providing for the arrangements spoken of in the letter to the President, but was inclined to accept our suggestion that a second general order be issued requiring camp commandants to report to the Department which State Commissions appeared at the camps to canvass the votes of their citizen soldiers, upon what dates and the units voting. He said that he would welcome any complaints that were brought to his attention, if we had any to offer after the event.

Next came a complaint of our Columbus, Ohio, Branch, accompanied by an affidavit from a colored trained nurse that she had responded immediately to an urgent appeal in the press for trained nurses to care for sick soldiers at Camp Sherman, going at night, and had been told that colored nurses were not wanted. The appeal for nurses read, "Don't stop to telephone or write, but get on the next train and report immediately at the base hospital at Camp Sherman." Eighty-eight deaths had been reported the day previously and appeals had been made for nurses to several Ohio cities, as far removed as Cleveland. After the colored nurse had been told that no more nurses were needed, she came back to the Superintendent's office and saw between twenty and thirty white nurses accepted; whereupon she was told the truth, showing apparently that the matter of securing competent nurses was to be subordinated to the maintenance of a social convention.

A letter from a mail carrier telling of the murder of a colored man and that he feared no adequate effort would be made to locate the murderer was the next item on the list of the day's happenings. This was referred to the local branch in the city concerned for immediate investigation.

Then our eyes lighted on a letter from an organization of colored people, in a town where the Association has no branch, telling of the fight this local group had been making to abolish the only segregated school remaining in that state and asking for financial assistance to continue the case in the courts. This was replied to promptly and appropriate action taken.

A report was received from the American Red Cross at Washington, in regard to a complaint of Pocatello, Idaho, colored people that colored soldiers had been refused service by local Red Cross workers at that place, in which an explanation was made by a local investigating committee appointed by the State Council of Defense. The complaint had been made sometime ago and there had already been considerable correspondence about it.

Then four letters were received from soldiers, speaking of objectionable conditions in three army camps. The complaints referred to the actions of white southern officers and soldiers toward the colored men. Such complaints, if they seem to be serious or to warrant such action, are usually sent to the War Department, which as a rule gives a sympathetic hearing to them.

The Kentucky Illiteracy Commission sent a copy of a law passed in that state providing for a census of illiterates and about which we had inquired. Two inmates of federal prisons wrote to enlist the Association's interest in their cases. In each of these cases, many of which are received, the petitioners alleged that their difficulty was either due to, or accentuated by, their race.

At this point the press clippings sent in by our clipping service appeared and were looked over. One of them told of action taken by the Toledo Branch to expose a colored swindler. One hundred dollars was paid, the clipping read, to a lawyer to fight the case. Another told of a protest made by the Dayton, Ohio, Branch. Ohio was at the front in this day's happenings.

Then came a letter to the Secretary from a prominent social welfare worker outlining a plan which had been previously discussed in conference and which was sent for criticism before its presentation on behalf of the leading national social and public welfare organizations and workers as the tentative working basis for securing common action on a reconstruction social welfare program of national scope. This was glanced through and put aside for more mature consideration.

Next was put on the Secretary's desk a letter sent by a division of the Navy Department to a colored applicant informing him in so many words that colored carpenters could not be employed by the Navy Department. Frankness is commendable. In so many cases we are "camouflaged." This one said what it meant and we assume meant what it said. (Two months ago the Secretary wrote to the Secretary of the Navy inquiring whether it was the intention to refuse to consider the applications of competent colored women for office work for which the Department was making urgent appeals to qualified persons to apply. No reply was received to our inquiry.)

At this point the Secretary inserts an extract from a letter received from President Moorfield Storey (arrived October 30). The main theme of Mr. Storey's letter was his desire that more branches be organized in the New England States, that we should be able to organize branches in Wisconsin, that it would be desirable to do all we can to increase our white membership. The part to be quoted is: "Our effort should be by combined membership (of white and colored people) to make our movement a movement for the rights of American citizens, and not purely the intent to help one race. I think the situation is improving, and in nothing more than the growing self-confidence of the colored people, and their
They are creating a body whose opinions cannot be disregarded and whose votes are sought."

Great Scott! Here comes a boy with proof of the November Branch Bulletin which ought to be looked over. It was shuffled off to the outer office to be read over with care for accuracy by one of the clerical staff, then to be returned to the Secretary for a final reading, which always results in more work for the printer.

Then some attention, according to the memoranda on the Secretary's desk, should be given to putting lynching data in shape for a special purpose, an important purpose, too, which if our hopes eventuate, will be disclosed later. Here is a copy of an objectionable "popular song," entitled "Nigger War Brides" sent in by the Columbus, Ohio, Branch Secretary. This is looked over, mental memorandum made as to the course to pursue, but left for another day. Mrs. Mary B. Talbert, who started out to boom the Fourth Liberty Loan (the Association had agreed to pay the expenses of colored women up to a total of $1,000 to tour the Southern States), and was delayed in Louisiana, had written regarding plans to tour the state of Texas in the interests of the N. A. A. C. P. as soon as the influenza epidemic permitted meetings. Her letter contained much interesting matter and was answered by the Field Secretary. Instructions were given to send literature to Texas cities for Mrs. Talbert's meetings.

Not to be omitted or overlooked are the letters that come to us from the "Feller That Needs a Friend," to borrow the phrase of a popular cartoonist. Such letters come, sometimes in choice English, often in the labored hand-writing of one who finds it hard to deal with so small an implement as pen or pencil, from men and women who look to the N. A. A. C. P., for advice, protection and defense against injustice. One of these awaits attention from a man who complained that he, a hard working and honest member of the community had been arrested as a "vagrant," accused of being an idler, whereas the contrary was the fact.

Finally, there are instructions to be given about important details of an investigation now under way by one of our staff, who wired from a distant point about developments concerning which he wished advice and instructions. A telegram, followed by a longer message by letter, was dispatched and the day's work was done. As the office staff closed their desks there remained regrets that the day was not longer or the workers more numerous.

A CORRECTION AND AN APOLOGY

In the November Crisis the Secretary inadvertently credited Francis G. Peabody with the first contribution of $1,000 to the Association's Anti-Lynching Fund, whereas the generous donor and good friend was Philip G. Peabody.

BALLADE TO PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR

Lucian B. Watkins

We would not call you, Dunbar, from your rest,
For you were weary when you softly sang
The lullaby that soothed your love-sweet breast,
And o'er the raptured world divinely rang,
Amid the storms of Life's tumultuous clang,
Of battle-thunders in the fateful Night
That hide the smiles of Heaven from our sight;—
Lo, while you sleep the sleep of Paradise,

We seek the blessed morning and its light,
"Ere sleep comes down to soothe the weary eyes!"

ENVLOY

Ah, Poet Paul! You sang and all is right!
We feel our souls expanding for the flight—
Lord, help us breathe to Thee a prayer and rise
And touch Thy Truth Eternal on the Height.
"Ere sleep comes down to soothe the weary eyes!"
Men of the Month.

GEORGE FRANKLIN COLLINS was born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1876; he died in the District of Columbia, in 1913. He was educated in the public schools and at the Howard Law School. He practiced law in the District of Columbia, and became Secretary and Treasurer of the Howard University Law School. Mr. Collins was the methodical and dependable secretary type and he held many such positions on account of his conscientious and exact work. He had served as Commissioner of Deeds in New Jersey, a delegate to the National Republican Convention in 1908, Secretary of the Negro Business League, District of Columbia, and of the Odd Fellows. He leaves a mother, a widow and an infant son.

THE LATE G. F. COLLINS

In Atlanta's Service Flag Parade, composed of white and colored divisions, marched Isaac Simms, a Negro, seventy-eight years old, with Service Flags of eleven stars.
THE CONSECRATION OF BISHOP E. T. DEMBY AT ALL SAINTS CHURCH, ST. LOUIS
THE Episcopal Church received the first American Negroes into its bosom and formed the first Missionary Society to work among them; but as slavery grew its ardor slackened and it was only too willing to yield place to Methodists and Baptists. As a result its colored membership has grown but slowly since freedom, and few of the white Bishops cared. The colored clergy protested and, finally, their protest bore fruit. On September 29, 1918, Edward Thomas Demby, a black man, was consecrated Bishop Suffragan of Arkansas and the Southwest at All Saint’s Episcopal Church, St. Louis, Mo. This marks an epoch. Bishop Demby was born in Delaware, in 1869, and was educated at Lincoln, Howard and Wilberforce. He was ordained Priest in 1899, and has served in Kansas City, Key West and Memphis. In 1912, he became Archdeacon in the Diocese of Tennessee.

Geraldine Pindell Trotter is dead at the age of forty-six. She was a helpmeet in the finest sense of the word. She had the singular ability and will to throw her whole soul into a cause, with no backward look, no limit of sacrifice. Physically she was always frail and but slightly identified in blood with “her race”—both her parents having but the slightest tinge of Negro blood. But “race” is not blood—it is education and environment, and from her youth she was loyal. I remember her as a shy slip of a girl at dancing class, when together we mastered the intricacies of the then new “Berlin.” Afterward she became bookkeeper in a crockery store, always punctual and accurate, yet feeling for a better destiny, a larger sacrifice. Finally she married William Monroe Trotter and at once made his cause, his beliefs, his triumphs and defeats one with her inmost soul. She never hesitated or wavered and she yielded every little temptation of home and dress and company and leisure for the narrow office and late hours and public life; yet through it all she shone clear and fine, and died as one whom death cannot conquer.

A well-known college president is Ralph W. McGranahan, a white man born in Pennsylvania, in 1862, who became President of Knoxville College, Tennessee, in 1899. This college is supported by the United Presbyterians for Colored Youth and has done most excellent work. On the retirement of Dr. Witherspoon, Mr. McGranahan has been given oversight of the entire educational work of this church among Negroes.
LITERATURE

JOSEPH S. COTTER in his book, "The Band of Gideon":
A seething world is gone stark mad;
And is drunk with the blood,
Gorged with the flesh,
Blinded with the ashes
Of her millions of dead.
From out it all and over all
There stands, years old and fully grown,
A monster in the guise of man.

And war itself is merciful
When measured by his deeds.
Beneath the Crescent
Lie a people maimed;
Their only sin—
That they worship God.
On Russia's steppes
Is a race in tears;
Their one offense—
That they would be themselves.
On Flanders plains
Is a nation raped;
A bleeding gift
Of "Kultur's" conquering creed.
And in every land
Are black folk scourged;
Their only crime—
That they dare be men.

Mr. Cotter's slender volume, "The Band of Gideon," shows poetic promise. There is a certain delicate immaturity about many of the rhymed verses quite in keeping with the writer's youth—he is but twenty-two—and his by no means vigorous health. But the poems in vers libre and the title poem are strong and forceful, and make possible the assertion that this young man has decidedly the gift of poesy. He deserves encouragement and we hope to see much more from his pen. The book which has an introduction by Cole Young Rice is very tasteful in appearance and is published by the Cornhill Company. It may be had of The Crisis. The price is one dollar, plus postage.

No finer word has been written by way of appreciation for Negro folk-song than that with which Mrs. Natalie Curtis-Burlin offers "to Soldiers, Sailors and Singers" her "Hymn of Freedom," for sextet or chorus of mixed voices, just published by Schirmer. With the possible exception of Harry T. Burleigh's "Deep River," no more interesting musical use has been made of any of the Negro Spirituals than the treatment which Mrs. Burlin here gives to the familiar slave song, "O Ride on, Jesus."

Mrs. Burlin says in her foreword:

The idea of a conquering power of righteousness riding on through the world, and the triumphant ring of the music with its clarion-call, seemed to me to offer an inspiring theme on which to build an American battle-song embodying the ideals for which America entered the war. Since with unhesitating alacrity, we have paraphrased lighter forms of Negro music in the popular songs sung by the troops—the all-prevalent "rag-time" which the war has spread far and wide—is it not equally appropriate that the nobler music of the Negro, the prayerful Spirituals should form the basis of a battle-hymn in this war wherein the black man, side by side with the white man, fights for the larger liberty of humanity?

In this Hymn I have closely followed the original Negro song, even in the simple and somewhat crude harmonies and progressions of the different voices. For this music sprang from men who best know how to value freedom, and I feel that their songs, as well as their lives, are their immortal gifts to Freedom's cause.

Music, history, world politics! What next will Mrs. Burlin do with Negro folk-song?
Mary White Ovington, writing in the Survey of Ulrich B. Phillips' "American Slavery," says in part:

The book is written in a spirit tolerant to the institution of chattel slavery, and yet so accurate and painstaking an historian is Mr. Phillips that one cannot lay it down without a feeling akin to nausea. For there are whole chapters concerned with the economics of the system, with kidnapping in Africa, with the breeding of slave stock in this country, and with the domestic slave trade of the nineteenth century. The relation of the price of a young unskilled, able-bodied slave to the price of cotton in New York is depicted on a graphic chart, and one sees flesh and blood moving with cotton, worth $1,100 a head in 1819, sinking to $700 a head in 1823, to rise to $1,300 in 1837. As capital moved south and west so the slave moved, and the trade was a busy one. Viewed from the business side, the slave took his place with other live stock, and no picture of stable plantation life can remove this inhuman aspect of the system.

One wishes in closing the volume that unless the descendant of the slave writes an exhaustive book from his standpoint, this might be the last word on the subject. It is a disgraceful page in American history, one that the whole country, the slave-trading North and the slave-holding South, must be glad to forget.

CHURCH AND ARMY

Colored men are at last being raised to the episcopate. The Churchman says:

On Michaelmas the Ven. Edward Thomas Demby, D.D., was consecrated Suffragan Bishop of Arkansas. St. Luke's Day is set for the consecration of the Ven. Henry Beard Delany, D.D., as Suffragan Bishop of North Carolina. Thus in less than a month two Negro bishops will be at work among their people in dioceses which have always been known as strong centres of Negro work. This is not the first time a Negro has sat in the American House of Bishops. No one who has been present at a General Convention in recent years can forget the consecration of the Ven. Henry Beard Delany, D.D., as Suffragan Bishop of North Carolina. Two men of more eminent fitness it would have been hard to find. Their consecration marks a forward step that many of us have for a long time been eager to see taken.

Colonel Franklin A. Denison, ranking colored officer, commanding the 370th Infantry in France, formerly the Eighth Illinois, is now convalescing in this country. The New York Evening Post comments:

He has the distinction of being Colonel of the only Negro regiment officered entirely by soldiers of that race. Colonel Denison, who is the ranking colored officer on the active list in the American army, said this week it was no military secret to announce that his organization was the first American regiment stationed in the St. Mihiel sector; that his regiment was one of three that occupied a sector at Verdun when a penetration there by the German army would have been disastrous to the Allied cause; and that his regiment went direct from the training camp to the firing line. The Eighth Illinois was organized in 1890 and took part in Cuba during the war with Spain. Some of its members saw service in the Philippines and in Mexico, and by its achievements on the battlefields of France has been called by the Germans the "American Black Devil Dogs."

REACTIONARY POLITICS

The recent attitude of the southern senators with regard to equal suffrage has been marked by an attempt to revive racial agitation. The Pittsburgh, Pa., Dispatch feels that something more than race prejudice lay back of these old-line reactionists and points out the real crisis of the matter. The new political status of the returned Negro soldier plus the enfranchisement of thousands of Negro women presents to the white Southerner a terrifying problem. The Dispatch says:

Thus the war and the suffrage issue are reviving and intensifying southern opposition to the Negro vote. Yet the South will be surprised and pained if the returning Negro soldiers, having experienced freedom from southern prejudice, should conclude not to return to Dixie. What would be the effect if they should join the northern trek, which has been evoking such appeals from the South for the Negroes not to desert their old friends?

Such an attitude as that of the southern senators gets its real significance from the fact that it emphasizes the passing of a régime. The New York Evening Sun points out that the question of slavery as a motivating factor in southern politics belongs to the past:

One of the classic speeches of the Senate was delivered during the recent debate on the revenue bill. Because the class of persons who could make that sort of speech is passing, it is probable that it will be the last oratorical utterance of its kind, and as such probably will have historical significance in the future.

The speech was made by Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi in support of his amendment to the suffrage resolution limiting suffrage to white women. It was in all respects just such a speech as might have been heard in the Senate in the old slavery days, but it is the kind that will be heard no more, because the men who knew the old South, who knew the slave question, are passing and the coming generation knows nothing of these things.

Alexander Fishman, writing in the New York Evening Globe, parallels the sentiments expressed by the South with those expressed once for the disenfranchisement of Jews:

With thousands of Negroes in the trenches, fighting on the frontier of freedom, it occurs to me that it is little short of treason, even for a senator hiding in the sanctuary of the Senate, to give voice to utterances such as those made by Senator James K. Vardaman of Mississippi. The German propagandists would have difficulty in finding more suitable material for spreading the belief among our colored population that we are not fighting for democracy than the speech delivered by this reactionary politician, who fortunately will not longer disgrace the Senate by being listed as one of its members.

Such sentiments present themselves with peculiar interest to the Jewish people, who, now at the dawning of a new era of social and political equality all over the world, can look back to the time when similar arguments were made by narrow-minded bigots in the different parliaments of Europe, for the disenfranchisement of mine own people. But today, thank God, the times are different.

THE COMMON BURDEN

IGNORANCE and lack of sympathy are at the root of race prejudice. Until the one is removed and the other awakened, there can be no real improvement. Development along these lines is needed more by the white than by the black man. J. L. Kesler says in the American City:

The Negro problem, public or private, industrial or institutional, is a human problem. Until we face the issue as human in its human relations; until we think of all citizens as human beings with human rights, human interests and human possibilities; until we insist upon equality of opportunity, economic, industrial, educational, equality before the law, equal sanitary provision, equal protection of person and property; until we become conscious of a common brotherhood and cease to exploit the weak and to treat them as beggars and pariahs; until we put democracy into our own life as we speed its splendid hope to the world—we are not even in sight of a solution, and futility faces our tasks of reform.

It is not simply a Negro problem; it is also a Caucasian problem. It is not simply the "white man's burden:" it is also the black man's burden. It is a problem of both races. Its solution means mutual understandings and readjustments. It means mutually a more generous sympathy and respect, without which there can be no common standing ground. This new attitude must not only be intellectually allowed by the white people; it must be consciously felt and communicated, so that a new atmosphere of dignity and freedom and possibility shall meet and strengthen the aspiration of the Negro race and superinduce a conscious self-respect and hope. By some such means alone may the perils of two segregated races with mutual interrelations, living in the same territory, be reduced to a minimum.

What he (the Negro) loathes and detests is the constant reminder that he is inferior, that anything is good enough for a "nigger;" that sanitation and sewerage and police protection and paved streets and parks are not necessary for him; that moral leprosy and segregated vice may preempt territory in his community and be immune to civic interest and disturbance; that he is discriminated against not on account of merit but on account of color; that his wife or his daughter, if they are beautiful—and some of them are—are not safe from insult on account of the lack of racial respect and honor.

Mr. Kesler feels that the rights of man regardless of race or color must be recognized. And white Americans must acknowledge and rectify the awful abuses of legislation and lynch law.

Respect! Here is the solution—interracial respect. For lack of it both races are in peril. Moral safety demands a deep and abiding respect for personality, interrational and among all intergraded social levels, if we are to escape the moral backlash between races and classes of society. Here we need a broader and deeper democracy. We may be separate as races or classes, but one as human beings and citizens. This conscious democracy of the rights of mankind, as human beings, is fundamental and final.

We must acknowledge that there has been discrimination against the Negro in legislation; but the law has not been so crooked as the execution of the law. Even in politics he has been cheated out of his vote more shamefully than prevented from voting by crooked legislation. This crooked politics has reacted on the integrity of the ballot against the very people who forget to do right. While justifying shady practices on the ground of the necessity of securing a white man's government, they were bringing in a blacker régime by their own duplicity than black ballots could have ever delivered. They forget that the moral law never sleeps, and never forgets. This phase of our politics is passing.

But the most outstanding crime is lynching. . . . The tragedies seem to thicken. The fact is, we are simply waking up. Our consciences are quickened. It is the hour before sunrise.

The sentiment is rising and organizing against this hideous savagery and orgy of beastliness. The battle is joined, but the fight is not over. There is a respectable number of people who do not belong to the underworld, and who, if they do not openly advocate lynch law, excuse it. They will not bring an offender to justice. They are not moved with moral passion and indignation against it. If they do not start the mob, they follow it, and enjoy as high sport this American diversion. Such men are not peculiar to the South, though the South has suffered most from their atrocities. Nor is the Negro the only victim, though he has been the chief sufferer.

In condemning mob violence the criminal is not excused from the villainy of his crime, whether Negro or alien. But law must be made supreme, justice more than a word on our tongues, and life made sacred and safe under all circumstances of excitement and of emotional stress and storm.

This is indeed frank speech from a man living in Texas. He concludes with a tribute to the Negro soldier:

The Negro as a soldier in the present war will be more than an episode in relation to his future history. . . . He is the synonym of loyalty. He is a typical patriot. He makes a good soldier. He is furnishing his quota of the American army. What effect will this war experience have on his public and institutional relations? Already the atmosphere is changing. I dare not guess what breath will blow upon us when the war is over. But this I know, the man who gives all a man can give for his country, his life, cannot be forgotten by the people; the race that fits into the world program of democracy and liberty will find a place and an appreciation, whatever his color or previous condition.

HONORABLE MENTION

WITH the exception of the French poilu no class of soldiers receive the attention and praise that falls to the lot of the Negro soldier. On every side we hear of his gallantry, his good humor, his unflagging determination, and, above all, his incalculable loyalty. At this season more than ever, when many hearts are heavy with longing for the black boys in France, "it will help us to remember these things."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says:

There is a Negro loyalty which is one of the finest traits of the race. It has been sung in song and told in story. The older generation were loyal. . . . Men of the South, intelligent and high-charactered men, some of whom had personal and family knowledge of this fine fidelity and devotion, have permitted grosser elements to persecute the race, purely out of political considerations. We trust, and now believe, that that discreditable era is drawing to a close. The colored people are justifying all of our faith. Not only are they at home responding well to every patriotic need, but their men in the field in France are proving themselves worthy comrades of those who so signally earned laurels at San Juan, and those who, on the Mexican border, under Pershing, proved themselves at Parral to be of the stuff American soldiers are made of.

The New York Evening Post feels that the Negro's unhesitating response to duty will do much toward the breaking-down of prejudice:

No Southerner is likely to make objection to the War Department's naming of a camp after a Negro soldier. Camp Alexander, at Newport News, has been designated in honor of the late Lieutenant John H. Alexander, Ninth U. S. Cavalry, a graduate of West Point, who, in the words of Brigadier-General Hutcheson, was "a man of ability, attainment, and energy." What the common sacrifices of white and black on the battlefield and at home are doing to soften racial lines, we cannot compute till after the war. If we may judge from the press comment on race relations which the Southern Workman, of Hampton Institute, publishes monthly, it is much. The latest issue includes a quotation from the Memphis Commercial Appeal, relating how "numerous white people in Memphis" have assisted in erecting a community house for Negro soldiers; an excerpt from the Charlotte Observer, praising "the enthusiastic farewell given by the colored population to the outgoing recruits from Camp Greene" as evidence of the Negro's "recognition of his responsibility in the war;" an item from the Athens, Ga., Banner, recording that the Red Cross Canteen Committee of Chattanooga had recently "shown every consideration" to a regiment of Negroes, distributing food and post cards and writing home for them.

- Isabel Field, of the Vigilantes, writes of the disappointment of German propagandists at the outcome of the East St. Louis riots:

The German propagandists discovered to their dismay that their tactics were having the effect of drawing general attention to the wrongs of the Negro and arousing interest and sympathy for him on all sides. The mute protest of the colored women and children, all in black, marching down Fifth Avenue, with no bands, no orators, no disturbances, simply carrying banners appealing for protection and justice, created a deep and lasting impression.

Finally, in a sort of desperation, the Germans spread the lies far and wide that Negro soldiers were being sacrificed at the front; they were put in the most dangerous places, and when wounded were left to suffer and die unattended on the battlefield. Here again the boomerang turned and hit the conspirators. If they hadn't started the treacherous propaganda, the American public would not have heard General Pershing's opinion of the colored troops. After denying the truth of "the stories, probably invented by German agents," he adds, "I cannot commend too highly the spirit shown among the colored combat troops who exhibit fine capacity for quick training and eagerness for the most dangerous work."

The Boston, Mass., American shows, by these two letters, how history repeats itself:

Editor Boston American:

I am reliably informed that two million colored Americans have registered for service in our army and that nearly 300,000 are already in active duty. In view of the splendid heroism which some of them displayed on the battlefields of France, it seems opportune to call attention to the following remarkable tribute paid to colored soldiers by the late General B. F. Butler, who recruited and commanded thousands of them during the Civil War.

This address was issued at the time he retired from the command of the Department of Virginia and North Carolina:

Headquarters Department Virginia and North Carolina, Army of the James:

January 8, 1865.

To the Colored Troops of the Army of the James—

In this army you have been treated not as laborers, but as soldiers. You have shown yourselves worthy of the uniform you wear. Your bravery has won the admiration even of those who would be your masters.

Your patriotism, fidelity and courage have illustrated the best qualities of manhood. With the bayonet you have unlocked the iron-barred gates of prejudice, opening new fields of freedom, liberty and equality of right to yourself and your race forever.

Comrades of the Army of the James, I bid you farewell! Farewell! !

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER,

Major-General Commanding.

What General Butler said more than half a century ago is true in our present struggle. Our colored fellow-citizens are sustaining America's honor no less loyally and efficiently than their white comrades. This is the unanimous opinion of our officers at the front.

AN AMERICAN.

Perhaps most significant of all is the effect which this increasing appreciation of black men is having on the economic problem. The New York Financial American speaks to the point:

The following advertisement appeared in one of our daily papers:

MEN—MEN—MEN

Government construction work. Bethlehem, Pa.; first-class accommodations free; no fee; fare paid; no enemy aliens; no colored; shipment daily. Apply quickly, company representative, Mr. Burderi, 51 Prince street, Manhattan.

What, might we ask, is the objection to Negro labor at Bethlehem, Pa? Why stigmatize our colored brethren by bracketing them with "no enemy aliens?" Daily we hear the complaint of the shortage of labor and yet here is one employer who deserves to be short, for he seeks to pick and choose rather than take that which is available. If the work is of such a nature that it cannot be readily performed by colored men, then tell it to them privately. Do not openly and flagrantly show an antipathy that we will wager is founded on either ignorance or prejudice. Millions of lives were offered that the black man might be free. Millions of other lives are now being sacrificed that all men may be free. Freedom means equal opportunity, at least insofar as that opportunity is compatible with man's ability.

Uncle Sam does not hesitate to call his colored sons to service. . . Yet behind the lines there remain some—not of their color—who doubt their fitness for "Government construction work." They are so well qualified for the world's construction work that thirteen of the regiment spoken of above are already wearing well-earned war crosses, while many others have paid the supreme sacrifice.

We wonder when men of narrow souls and traditional prejudices will wake up? Or is the white hand of a murderous German still better to some than the red-blooded heart of the loyal colored American?

Our boys "over there" can answer that question and the bigot will not be long in translating the reply.

And, finally, this from H. H. Windsor in Popular Mechanics:

"During the Civil War, it was no infrequent part of a northern General's report of a battle that "the colored troops fought bravely." The reports which are reaching us of the colored troops in France include more than "fought bravely"—they fight magnificently.

A letter from an officer describing such a regiment going "over the top" gives a picture worth painting. Bare-headed, shirts unbuttoned or no shirts at all, with the most unharrowed yells, as demons let loose, they went at the enemy like a cage of wild lions released. . . . Yes, the colored troops are still "fighting bravely.""

Anguished hearts will take some slight solace from this letter of Rev. Henry Wilds Smith in the Lee (Mass.) Gleaner:

"A day or two ago we had our first funeral. It was not one of our boys, but a colored boy from Alabama, who had been brought into our hospital. For some days it was known that he could not live, and I had visited him several times. No coffins had come, so the boys made a pine box. We gave him a soldier's funeral; as good as a general would have. We wrapped him in the United States flag, half-filled the grave with holly, then taps were sounded. How shrill it sounded over the chilly French fields and how white the boys' faces looked in the fading light. So that is the end of the colored boy from Alabama. Aye, not the end, but the beginning. He must have had a spark of idealism or he would not have been here. Somehow, it got hold of the boys and me."

LABOR AND MIGRATION

The continued exodus of the Negro from the South has not only improved the social and economic condition of the migrant, it has also awakened the South to a sense of its own remissness. According to the Chicago, Ill., News, Monroe N. Work said recently before the Southern Sociological Congress:

So great is the migration to the North, which began in 1915 and continues to the present time, and so far reaching and profound were its effects, that the whole fabric of the South's social structure was disturbed and shaken in a way that it had not been since the Civil War and Reconstruction days. The loss of so large a part of its labor caused the South to see the value of this labor in a new light. As a result the South is giving labor better pay, according it juster treatment, better protection under the law and better educational facilities. There is also a disposition to endeavor to find out just how the Negro feels and thinks about the situation and what he would advise doing to better conditions and make him more contented and satisfied.

Negro labor itself has assumed a new attitude toward the South and on all sides colored men express freely their views concerning the causes for their migration. Mr. Work quotes from a letter written by a Negro to the Macon, Ga., Telegraph:

"First enforce the law equally between all men, black and white. The wholesale arrest of Negroes for very slight causes tends to create a feeling in the minds of our people that they are not getting a square deal. In the second place, public school accommodation for our people in the South in many places is very poor. Hence it is an easy matter for many of the Negroes to be lured away when they are told by an immigrant agent that in the North they will not only receive better wages, but that they will receive better advantages for the education of their children. The Negro has settled objections about educating his children. This he means to do no matter what sacrifice as a parent he has to make."

The Dixwell Avenue Congregational Church, New Haven, Conn., has through its Men's Club arranged for its thirteenth season of lectures. There will be ten addresses by ministers, social workers and others, including James W. Johnson of the N. A. A. C. P., and Emmett J. Scott.

SOCIAL PROGRESS

The cornerstone of the colored Y. M. C. A., at 181 West 135th Street, New York City, was laid October 13, by William Fellows Morgan, President of the Y. M. C. A. in New York. Dr. R. R. Moton delivered the principal address. The cost of the ground, building and equipment will be $358,000, which has been provided for with the exception of $45,000, which must be raised by the branch. On November 3, the cornerstone of the colored Y. W. C. A., on West 137th Street, was laid. It will be a five-story building, with balcony and swimming pool, gymnasium, laundry, cafeteria, reception, reading and check rooms, offices, auditorium, class and club rooms.

Dr. Julia P. H. Coleman, who was "Jim-Crowed" by the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis Electric Railway, May 25, has won a verdict of twenty dollars.

The ban against Negro and white boxing competitors which has been in operation in New Jersey, under the Frawley Law, has been lifted, affording Negroes equal opportunity for titles.

Discrimination against Negro women employees at the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, Buffalo, N. Y., has been stopped, through action of the N. A. A. C. P.

The Pennsylvania State Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Ruth L. Bennett is president, has formally opened a building to be used as a home for colored women war workers in the vicinity of Chester, and as a center for governmental activities.

The Georgia Division of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense at a recent meeting in Atlanta, adopted a resolution praising the war work of Negroes in that state.

pieces and a boys' band, a Y. M. C. A. building that cost $25,000, a church which cost $15,000; and an eight-room schoolhouse, to accommodate 1,000 pupils, with colored teachers; a lodge building for men and a Y. W. C. A. have been planned.

Colored physicians of Detroit, Mich., are preparing to establish the Dunbar Memorial Hospital. They are being opposed by an institution which proposes to sell stock and make money out of a hospital movement. The trustees of the Dunbar Hospital are Mrs. Mary Cole, Mrs. A. F. Henson, Mrs. William Stone, Dr. W. E. Johnson, the Rev. Mr. R. L. Bradby, and Messrs. R. C. Barnes, W. E. Dean, William Osby and Bert Scott.

Baker Emergency Hospital in Jackson Ward, Richmond, Va., has over one hundred patients and is, according to the Times Dispatch, "A well-organized, well-equipped, beautifully managed emergency hospital,—and the colored people are doing it all themselves." Mary E. Carter is superintendent.

A modern Y. M. C. A. building has been erected for Negro workmen at Nitro, W. Va., at a cost of $15,000. It has billiard tables, bowling alleys, shower bath, soda fountain, a library of 1,000 volumes and thirty periodicals, and a moving picture theatre. Two colored college men are in charge.

EDUCATION

ORGANIZATION of the Board of Trustees of the Theological and Training Seminary for Negro Baptist Preachers at Nashville, Tenn., has been perfected. The Rev. Mr. C. H. Clark, of Nashville, is chairman. Aside from $25,000 for the building and site, formerly Boscobel College, an additional $25,000 is needed for operating expenses.

The Armstrong-Slater Memorial Trade Building at Tuskegee Institute on October 14, was destroyed by fire, representing a loss of $100,000. Temporary quarters, however, make it unnecessary to interfere with the course of study.

The Haines School, Augusta, Ga., is making a drive to raise $5,000. Miss Lucy Laney, the well-known colored educator, is at the head of this school.

The National Training School of Durham, N. C., is appealing for an endowment of $250,000. It has a Service Flag of forty-one stars, and one of its students has been awarded the French War Cross.

The Late Mary Benson, of New York City, bequeathed to the American Church Institute for Negroes $90,000 for local work and $20,000 for other work.

The will of the late Elizabeth L. Allen of Springfield, Mass., bequeaths $2,000 to the Daytona, Fla., Industrial School for colored girls.

THE CHURCH

THE Metropolitan Baptist Church, New York City, of which the Rev. Mr. W. W. Brown is pastor, has purchased the New York Presbyterian Church, a plot 100 x 100, on the northeast corner of 128th Street and Seventh Avenue, making further inroads for Negroes on the Harlem residential section. The cost of the property is $100,000.

The re-opening and dedication exercises of the New Mother A. M. E. Zion Church, in New York City, were held Nov. 10-24. The Rev. Mr. J. S. Caldwell was Presiding Bishop and Rev. Mr. B. T. Judd, Presiding Elder. The Rev. Mr. J. W. Brown is pastor. The church was founded in 1796, and has a membership of 1,900. The rebuilding and alterations cost $40,000.

Hortense White of Fayetteville, N. C., a graduate of Freedmen's Hospital, is the first colored nurse to be appointed at the Isolation Hospital, Asbury Park, N. J.

"Aunt Carrie" Dye is dead at Newport, Ark. She was known as a seer and said to be one hundred years old. Her estate is estimated at $100,000. She was a member.

C Solon Menos, Minister from Haiti, died from influenza at Washington, D. C., during the Liberty Loan Drive.
C A colored woman, Jeanette Carter, has been appointed Director of the Colored Bureau of Industrial Housing and Transportation in the U. S. Department of Labor. She has practised law and is a notary public.
C Jordan C. Jackson of Lexington, Ky., is dead at the age of seventy. He was at one time teller of the local Freedmen's Bank, a trustee of Berea College and a delegate to the National Republican Convention. He had amassed considerable property.

FOREIGN

WHITE workmen struck in Johannesburg, South Africa, and were granted their demands. When 152 natives struck, they were arrested and sentenced to two months' labor, under guard. This discrimination aroused public opinion, however, and the sentence was suspended. General Botha issued a manifesto on the subject and appointed a commission, which reports that there can be no real content in the country as long as the natives are denied citizens' rights.
C Sir Sydney Olivier, formerly Governor of Jamaica, has written an excellent pamphlet on the League of Nations and Primitive People.
C The Director of Education for Southern Rhodesia reports that the natives realize the importance of both scholastic and industrial training, and are taking advantage of their opportunities in nearly every district. Missionaries are training teachers.
C E. Scipio Pollard, a colored Barrister-at-Law, is admitted to be not only the ablest lawyer in the West Indies, but also "one of the best criminal lawyers of the British Empire," which comment was published recently in one of the dailies of Trinidad.
C One of the most eminent colored men in the Island of Trinidad is Dr. S. M. Laurence, M.B.; C.M., Edinburgh; a member of the Legislative Council, the governing body of the Island, all the members of which are appointed by the Crown; Port-of-Spain City Council; Board of Education; and Council of the Medical Board.
C A writer in the World's Work says that a New York Negro is a member of the Military Revolution Committee of the Bolsheviki in Russia.
C The report of the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of England has decided that the title of 73,000,000 acres of land in Rhodesia vests in the English Crown and not in the Chartered Company. Consequently, the concessions made by this company are void. It is now the duty of the natives to convince the Crown that this land should be allotted to them. This is probably the greatest land case in history.
C On June 19, the new Constitution of Haiti was approved. By it, foreigners and foreign corporations are for the first time given the right to acquire real estate in the Island.

CRIME

A RIOT started between sailors and Negroes over the jostling of women in a Philadelphia, Pa., trolley car. When the car stopped, the sailors threw the Negroes to the street and ordered the motorman at the point of a revolver to start the car.
C Five persons were killed and seventy-three injured in a race riot at Hopewell, Va., because the proprietor of a mess-hall at the DuPont Munition Plant slapped a colored woman in the face, for "refusing to obey orders.
C The homes of Negroes who have invaded Jones Street, St. Louis, Mo., are persistently being stoned by whites, breaking windows and doing other damages. Appeals to the police force have brought little, if any, protection.
C Investigation of the race riot in Newport News, Va., September 21, shows that the fault was entirely due to a false accusation of theft made by a white photographer against a colored soldier. Only two soldiers were involved. The army officers who investigated the matter exonerated the soldiers.
C There have been the following lynchings since the President's letter, July 26, 1918:
   July—Texas, 1; Oklahoma, 1.
   August—Louisiana, 1; Georgia, 2; Florida, 1.
   September—Georgia, 1.
   November—Rolesville, N. C., Nov. 5. George Taylor, hanged "for rape." Sheffield, Ala., Nov. 11, William Bird, hanged "for creating disturbance."
Total, 9.
MEN AND WOMEN TRAINED IN AGRICULTURE
WILL BE IN GREAT DEMAND AFTER THE WAR

"Plans for providing the returned soldier with land are rapidly taking shape.   Let us not think of the individual returned soldier exiled to a tongue of green land between the stony breasts of western mountains   but of organic communities of one or two hundred farms with competent agricultural advisers to brace up the technique of those who are willing to learn."—The New Republic.

Secretary Lane is urging that plans and surveys and studies be instituted now so that when demobilization begins, farms and homes may be offered to the returned soldiers on the most encouraging terms.

Under the Smith-Hughes Vocational Education Act, the Government is already training Teachers, Agriculturalists and Mechanics whose services will be in great demand after the war to help these soldiers and rural inhabitants adjust themselves to the problems of reconstruction.

Tuskegee Institute offers the Smith-Hughes Course in:
