

WASHINGTON, D.C. OFFICE

Judith A. Assmus. CDF monitor of child development and day care policy issues and programs, she is liaison to child care and social services groups. She is also director of the Washington Research Project Action Council.

Diane Bauer. Formerly a free-lance writer and journalist, Ms. Bauer currently is involved with issues of information privacy and behavior modification.

Stephan Berzon. Mr. Berzon is a staff attorney for CDF litigating issues involving the federal government and child welfare issues. He previously was at the Legal Aid Society in Alameda, California.

Cynthia G. Brown. Formerly with HEW's Office for Civil Rights, Ms. Brown is a data analyst and federal policy monitor on school exclusion and school desegregation issues. She is also CDF's liaison with the Southern Education Coalition.

Audrey Colom. Local child advocate in the District of Columbia on issues of special education arising from Mills v. Board of Education, she is CDF liaison to women's groups.

J. Brinton Dillingham. Mr. Dillingham is an investigator for the 1984 project involving data collection and privacy safeguards.

Fred Hiatt. A researcher for the 1984 project on issues of medical experimentation.

Judith W. Humphreys. A part-time consultant, Ms. Humphreys works on child and maternal health issues.

Wendy Lazarus. A researcher focusing on health issues, Ms. Lazarus is developing a handbook on child health care policies and is monitoring federal programs of child and maternal health.

Linda Lipton. A staff attorney at CDF, Ms. Lipton is working on legal issues arising out of the 1984 project.

Ann Rosewater. Ms. Rosewater is a data and policy analyst working primarily on right to education issues, particularly school exclusion.

Lisbeth Schorr. A consultant to CDF, Ms. Schorr is developing the handbooks on child health issues for policymakers and consumers and will direct CDF activities in the child health care area.

William Smith. A former committee staff counsel in the U.S. Senate, Mr. Smith is now director of CDF's 1984 project.

Michael Trister. Formerly an associate professor of law at the University of Mississippi Law School, Mr. Trister directs CDF's EPSDT program and litigates CDF issues.

Supportive Services

Sheila Brown, Secretary.

Marjorie Hawkins, Secretary.

Pat Hervey, Secretary.

Starr Pavis, Receptionist/Secretary.

Carolyn Tapscott, Secretary.

NEW YORK CITY OFFICE

Justine Wise Polier. Director of the Juvenile Justice Division, Judge Polier served on the Family Court in New York City for 35 years before joining CDF. She is the author of many articles and publications, and is active in many child-serving agencies.

Jane Knitzer. A psychologist, Dr. Knitzer will develop a profile of how social services for children are delivered in one state. She will also examine barriers to services for children in their homes.

Brenda McGowan. Dr. McGowan is the supervisor of CDF's study of children of women prisoners. A former faculty member of Columbia University's School of Social Work, Dr. McGowan will direct the study of mentally retarded children.

Elizabeth Wickenden. A consultant on child welfare issues, Ms. Wickenden is a professor of urban studies at the City University of New York.

Supportive Services

Gerald Laskey, Secretary.

Luba Lynch, Secretary.

AUSTIN, TEXAS OFFICE

Don Rademacher. Field investigator for the juvenile justice division, Mr. Rademacher has directed CDF's study on children in adult jails.

Mary K. Reynolds. Secretary and researcher.

MISSISSIPPI

David Rice. A field investigator, Mr. Rice is gathering data on and helping to organize children and families with special needs in Mississippi. He formerly was the director of the Child Development Group of Mississippi (CDGM).