

The government is asking the court to dismiss this case on the grounds that Randall's legal claims should be heard solely in the deportation case. Randall and her colleagues oppose this because an immigration judge is not able to rule on constitutional questions, such as those raised by the Randall case. A hearing on the dismissal will be held in federal court on [DATE], and a decision can be expected several months after the hearing.