

The National Shrine of The Divine Mercy, on Eden Hill in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, became a reality at the insistence of many of the first Marian Helpers who wanted it built as a votive gift of thanksgiving for graces they received.

The richly appointed interior, additionally embellished by appropriate decorations for special holy days and events, is noted for its wood-carvings, including a reredos with statues of the twelve apostles, and a niche with a statue of the Immaculate Conception sculptured in Carrara marble. The altars and sanctuary floor are made of Vermont marble. The Stations of the Cross were imported from Spain. The stained glass, designed by a local artisan, depicts Gospel scenes that speak of God's mercy.

The shrine is especially dear to the Marian priests and brothers who personally had a hand in its construction. Here, before the enshrined Divine Mercy image, their Holy Masses and prayers are offered for the intentions of the recipients and donors of this card.

The use of this card signifies a gift with which the donor spiritually and materially supports Marian candidates to the priesthood and religious life, as well as the variety of apostolates in education, the printed word, and missions which Marian priests and brothers exercise on every continent, proclaiming God's unbounded mercy and encouraging a lively devotion to Mary, their Immaculate Patroness.
