

The best members of the American Humanist Association are people who do not like to join organizations. The movement has often been called the "organization of the un-organizable." Nevertheless, if Humanism is to become a significant factor in our lives and culture we must join together now to accomplish this task. The AHA faces the challenges of helping to provide a perspective for modern man, of engaging in needed community service projects, of assisting in the development of the unique potentialities of the Humanist family and generally bringing the suggestion of Humanism to those who would be receptive.

We desperately need the commitment of all those who are in basic agreement with the ideas expressed in this pamphlet. If you are in sympathy with them let me urge you to tear out the application blank on the next page and mail it today to Humanist House, Yellow Springs, Ohio.

I believe that your relationship with the American Humanist Association would be mutually beneficial. Together we could work to meet the challenge of the Humanist pioneer, John Dewey:

"Nothing but the best, the richest and fullest experience possible is good enough for man."

Tolbert H. McCarroll
Executive Director
American Humanist Association
