
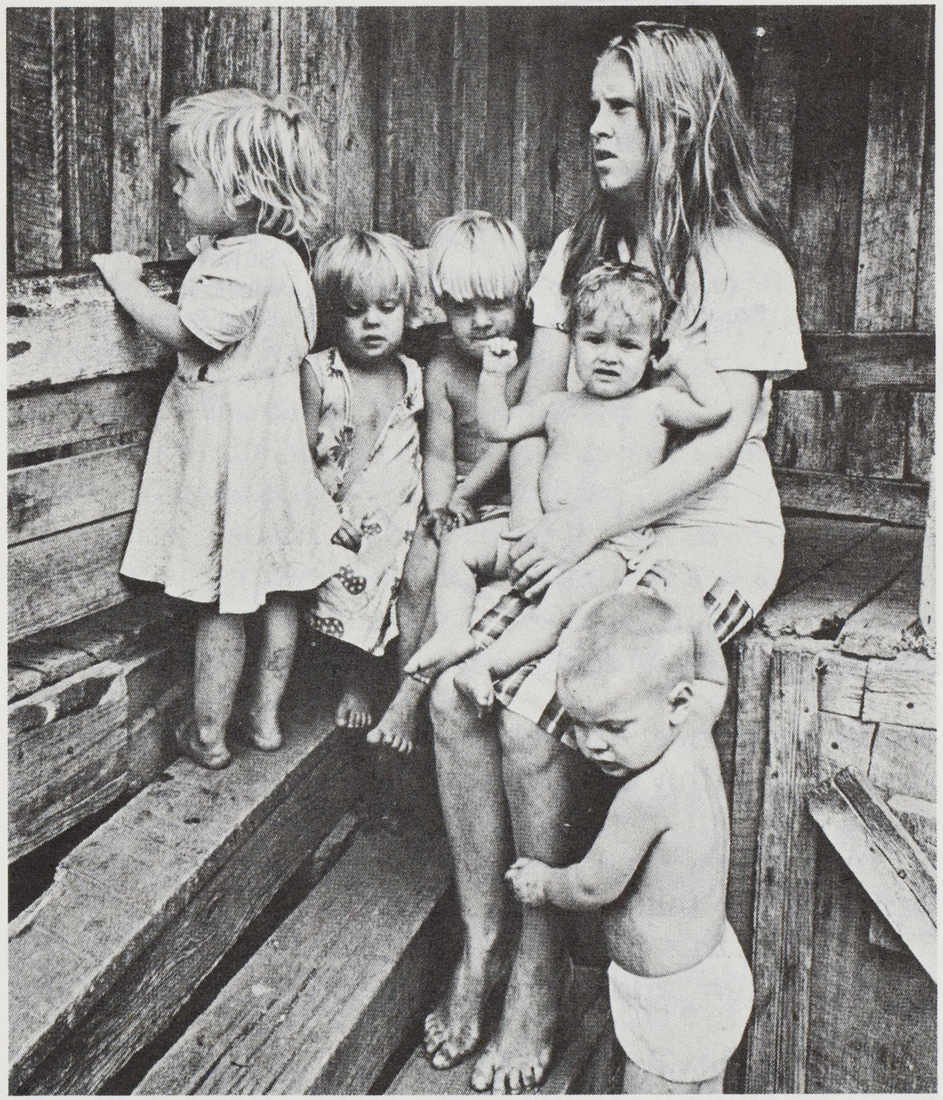
Black and white welfare families in the South.



and no one had a winter coat, though the temperature often went below freezing.

The whole family had diarrhea, which the visitor believed came from drinking the creek water.

The experience of this family could be multiplied by the tens of thousands.

When you look at the chart on page 12 you can see that by far the biggest part of the Social Welfare program is