

The Freeman

The Foundation has, for thirty years, published our monthly journal, The Freeman. This study journal on the Ideas of Liberty and the positive case for freedom, has been an invaluable resource to friends of the freedom philosophy.

The Freeman is much more than just a monthly magazine. The nature of its articles and essays makes it a timeless tool in the advancement of one's understanding of subjects relating to the free society.

A subscription to The Freeman is available to anyone in the United States at his or her request. Our cost is more than $20.00 per subscription, but no charge is imposed. Only your continued interest in the cause of liberty is required. Tax-deductible donations are encouraged to cover the costs of The Freeman and other FEE educational programs. (Subscriptions to a foreign address require a minimum charge of $10 to cover the extra costs of postage and handling.)

Bound Volumes of The Freeman

For a helpful assembly of Freeman articles, sturdily bound volumes are available for the calendar years from 1969 to date. Attractively sewn in a single volume with hard cover, each bound volume contains twelve issues—January through December—768 pages, fully indexed for handy reference to the latest literature on freedom.
