

Friends for a Non-Violent World (FNVW) seeks to promote nonviolence. We provide educational opportunities, resources, and support to those endeavoring to find alternatives to violence in their personal lives, their communities, and society at large. Our programs address the need for nonviolence in the lives of children, adolescents and adults.

We believe that violence is a learned behavior. It can be unlearned. We also believe that nonviolence is a learned behavior, so we work to teach ourselves and others how we can live more nonviolently in this society.

We recognize that violence takes many forms and that whatever form violence takes, no one is left unaffected. But just as violence touches the lives of each and every one of us, so can the spirit of cooperation that propels us toward true peace with justice.
