

LET the gray symbolize the unknown; the small circle the knowledge acquired say ten years ago; the large circle what's presently known. Observe how increased knowledge exposes one to more of the unknown.

Socrates was acclaimed a wise man for asserting he knew nothing but that he knew he knew nothing. No fool he, nor need we be!

Knowing more about economic and political science—taking care not to be know-it-alls — and making known what we learn is FEE's role.
