

IT ALL DEPENDS —

■ The following incidents recently brought home to me the vital difference between the profit motive and "free government service."

I was completing some last-minute Christmas shopping in a large department store. At last, my turn came to be "waited on"; and as the clerk rang up the sale, I commented, "Quite a crowd."

"Yes," she smiled, "our best day yet!"

I thought no more about it until I reached home. The mail truck was approaching, so I walked back down the driveway to pick up the mail, thanking the postman and remarking that he must have quite a load on this last day before Christmas.

"Yes," he replied, "the worst day we've ever had!"
