

Cornerstones of Liberty and Democracy

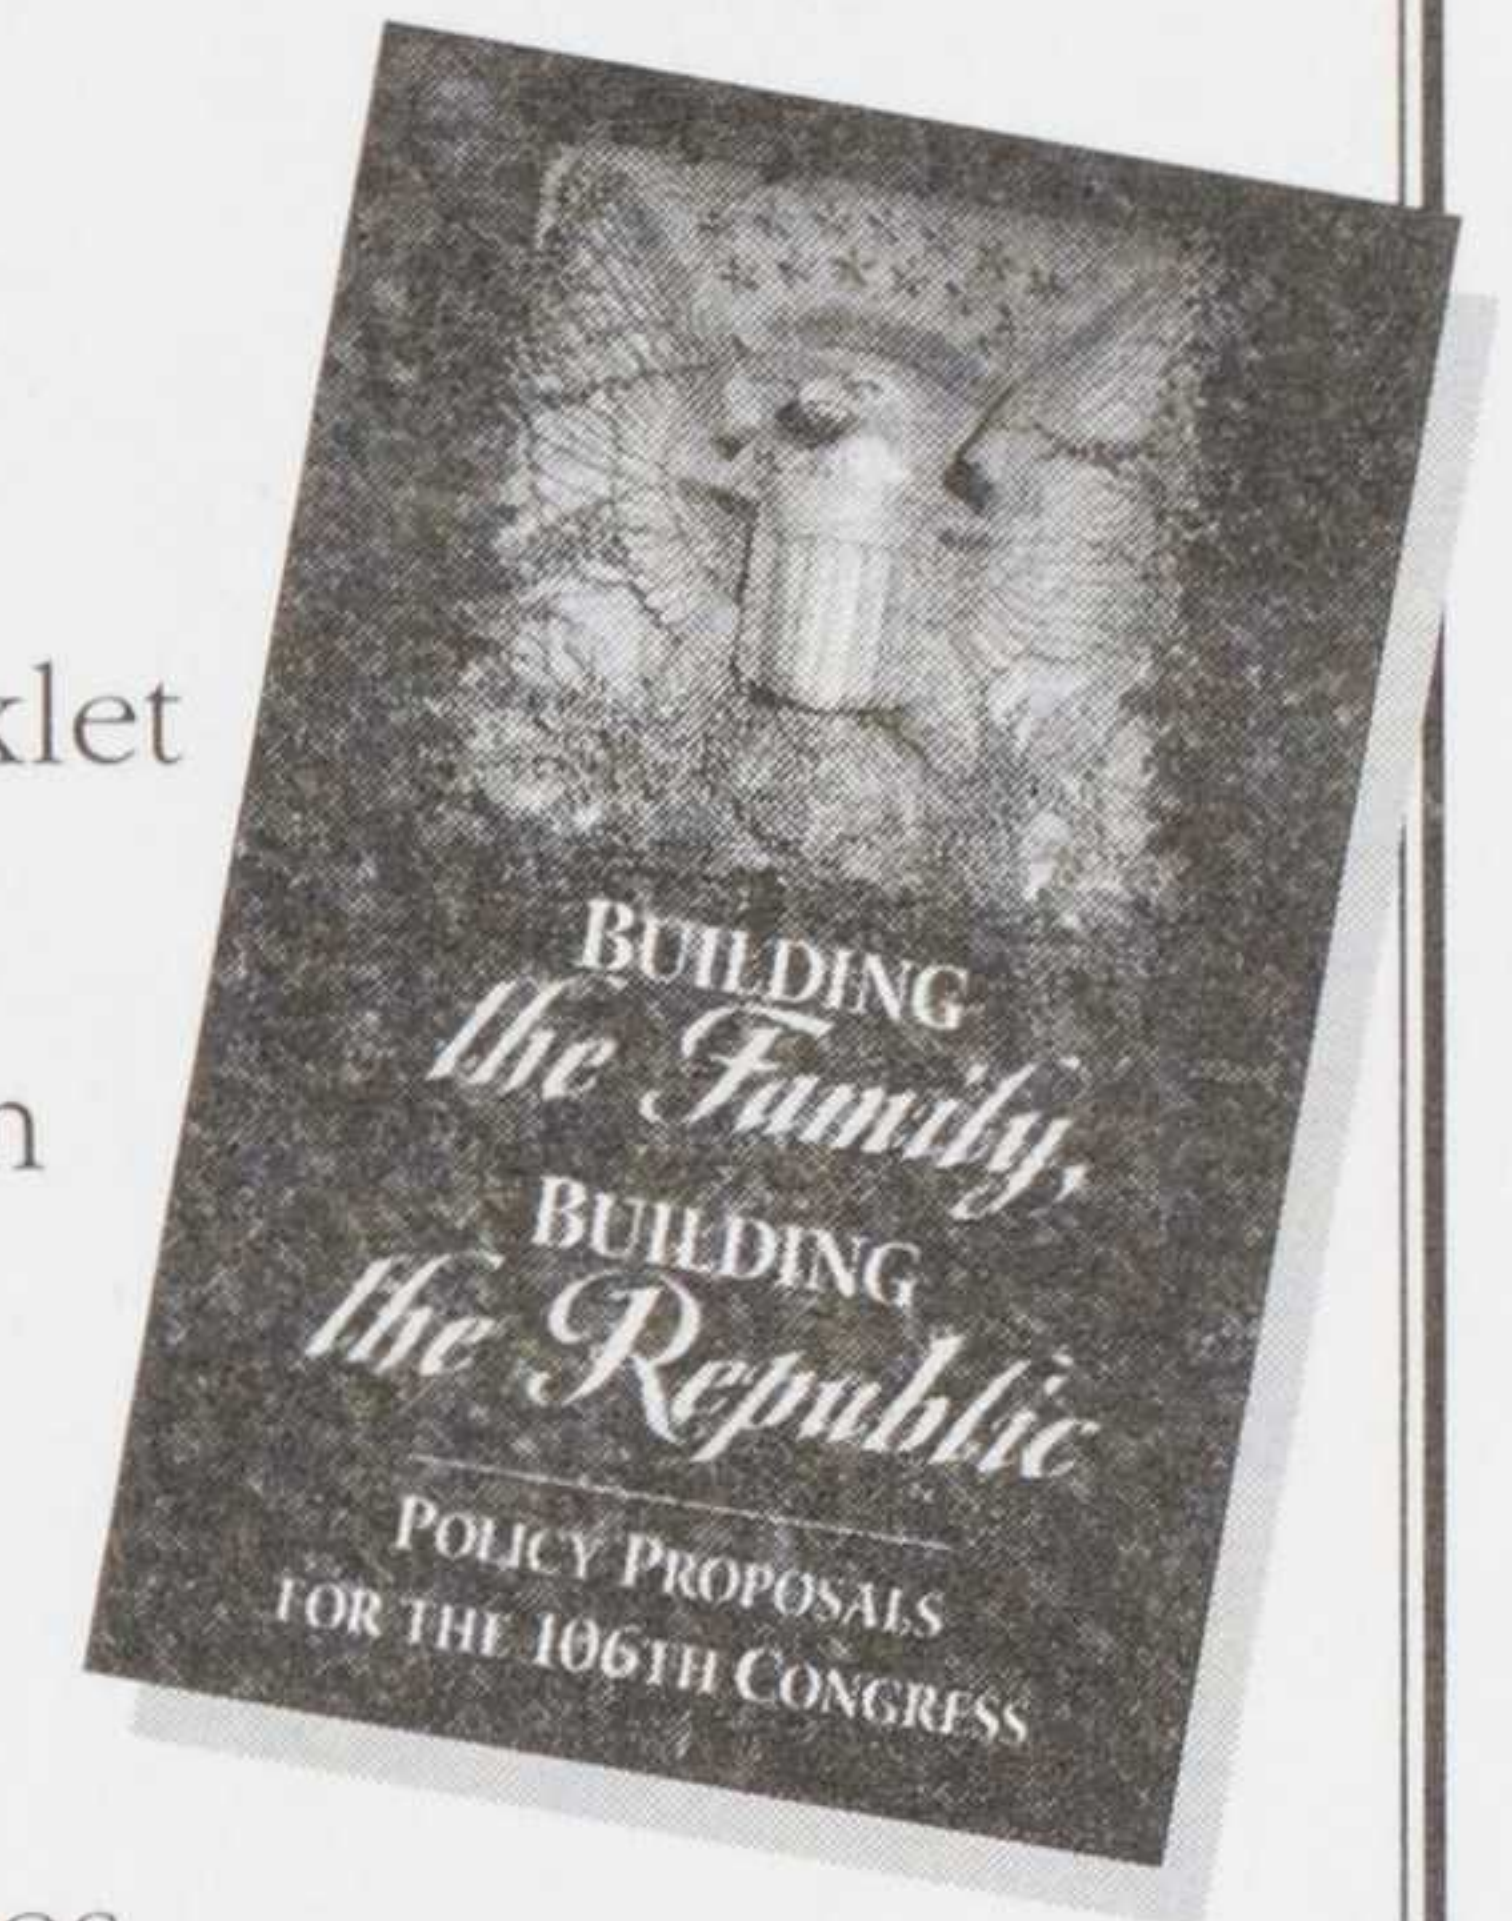

On July 4, 1776, "The Unanimous Declaration of the Thirteen United States of America" was approved by the Second Continental Congress. Twelve years later, the Constitution was officially adopted. Based upon the foundational principles established in these two documents, the United States has thrived for over two hundred years. Our unparalleled freedoms will last, however, only if we continue to adhere to these principles. Family Research Council is proud to offer an attractive, pocket-sized booklet containing the timeless words of our Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

Building the Family, Building the Republic: Policy Proposals for the 106th Congress

What will be accomplished in the 106th Congress? That remains to be determined by the 535 men and women in the House and Senate. To help you participate in the ongoing legislative process and ensure that legislative proposals reflect Constitutional and Biblical principles, Family Research Council has prepared an informative booklet, Building the Family, Building the Republic. It has been sent to members of Congress and is available to you, our constituents. This booklet contains specific recommendations made by our panel of policy experts for specific action in the areas of education, federal and constitutional liberty, foreign policy and defense, life and health issues, marriage and the family, and the safety of local communities.

The Common Sense: Voters' Opinions on Key Issues

The Common Sense analyzes the results of a nationwide poll conducted on the same issues covered in Building the Family, Building the Republic. The answers provided by voters to 22 questions clearly illustrate the hopes and dreams of the majority of Americans — male and female, conservative and liberal, young and old. This booklet is a must-read for anyone interested in the philosophy, priorities, and passions of today's Americans.

To order any or all of these excellent resources, please complete the other side of this card and return it in the enclosed envelope.

