

a sober, balanced overview of Third World economic and social problems by a prominent statesman and former President of the Movement of Non-Aligned Countries.

- 72 tables and 25 graphs based on United Nations, U.S. Government and other international sources.
- A primary reference book with comprehensive, reliable data on the current international economic crisis.
- A must for any serious student of contemporary world affairs.

Publishing Office of the Council of State
Havana, 1983. Laminated paperback.
224 pages.

“When President Castro went to the podium to address the Heads of States at the Seventh New Delhi Summit, each Head of Delegation was given a volume summarizing his findings on the state of the world economy. This was without a doubt a turning point in the summit, for the speech and the presentation of the volume gives a new sense of purpose to the movement, namely the need to link politics with economics if there is to be any change in the world order.”

This volume will give the reader the theoretical and empirical bases for the Third World’s call for a new world order.”

Professor A.W. Singham, who attended the Seventh Summit of Non-Aligned Countries

The World Economic and Social Crisis, by Fidel Castro, and published for the Non-Aligned Summit in New Delhi, March 1983, is a compelling summary of the Third World crisis, indeed the crisis facing all mankind at this time. Written with commanding objectivity, the work marshalls a formidable array of compensatory statistics, the entire spectrum of trade, financial flows, patterns of investment and the other aggregates of the world economy. The presentation of the hard, social figures concerning poverty and hunger, between pillars of human despair, provides a glimpse of an abyss into which our hopes for a better world will disappear if something is not done and done quickly.*

Reading The World Economic and Social Crisis is a must for every progressive, liberal, indeed every human being who cares about people. For those who do not care so much for people but are concerned for our survival as a species, there are sections on the armament race. This is shown to be the ultimate economic insanity even as it compels us, in its magnitude, to ask ourselves the unthinkable question “will we have a tomorrow?”

*Michael Manley
President, People’s National Party of Jamaica and leader of the opposition in Jamaica*

