Skemp – by Robert O. Skemp

Commissioned in 1982 and painted on wood, this version's most distinctive features are the door in the background, and the rays themselves which seem to "come out" of the image in the direction of the onlooker. Shortly after its completion, the original painting was given to Pope John Paul II who, in turn, gave it to the National Shrine of The Divine Mercy in Tanzania.

Shrine – by Maria Gama

In 1945 this image was painted under the direction of Fr. Joseph Jarzebowski, MIC. A black and white photograph of the first Divine Mercy image, painted by Eugene Kazimirowski under Blessed Faustina's direction, was used as the source. Prints of this image were first published in 1946. The original now hangs above the altar in the National Shrine of The Divine Mercy here on Eden Hill.

Hyla – by Kathleen Weber

Based on the image painted in 1943 by Adolph Hyla as his votive offering to the Krakow-Lagiewniki Chapel of the Sisters of Our Lady of Mercy in thanksgiving for his family's preservation during World War II, this painting was completed in 1992. Although this version departs in several points from the very first Divine Mercy image, it enjoys great popularity. The original hangs in the Marian Helpers Center here in Stockbridge, MA.
