

The industrious and thrifty, those who pay most of the Nation's taxes, who produce most of its goods and services, and who best can confront threats to their economic health, are the principal guardians of American civilization.

Introduction to
"AIER After 50 Years"

The politicians and money managers in western civilization systematically have embezzled by the inflating process the surplus product of all who produce. Few fully understand the success of this process. In just four and one-half decades, our planners have taken $6,855,500,000,000 (trillion) from the savings of the Nation's "forgotten citizens," those who mistakenly relied upon the dollar and dollar-denominated assets for a store of value.
