

Highest Decorated—Yet Most Fired Police Officer In Arizona History Takes To The Airwaves !

Retired Police Officer Jack McLamb is one of a new breed. His dedication to his country and its constitution goes beyond the unusual—and now he's broadcasting his message on nationwide radio.

Jack's career as a Phoenix police officer reads like a script of a stranger-than-fiction docu-drama. For over a decade (1976 to 1986) he received more awards for outstanding service than any other officer in Arizona history, until he sustained an injury in the line-of-duty. He was forced to take a medical retirement in 1986. That's the "official" story. But McLamb's love for truth and his courage to uphold his sworn oath to the constitution resulted in being fired ... twice! Here are the highlights:

In 1984, Officer McLamb was fired for refusing to turn over his national mailing list of police officers and the financial records of his Aid & Abet Police Newsletter. It seems that Phoenix police Chief Ortega was infuriated at Jack's efforts to educate fellow officers regarding the constitutional and moral issues that Jack espoused in his police publication. Jack stood tall on his 1st and 4th Amendment rights and refused to turn over the records. He was immediately terminated for "insubordination."

Jack appealed to the Civil Service Board, which voted unanimously to rehire Jack, with full back pay, and issued a public chastisement to the Police Department and Chief Ortega. McLamb instantly became the black sheep on the force, even being followed by superiors night and day for nine months. Hey, who ya gonna call? The Police?? Jack then appealed to a Federal District Judge, but could not break the chokehold that Ortega held on local politics. Even the judge refused to stand up for his rights—by rejecting Jack's evidence.

Meanwhile, peace-loving Jack McLamb went about his job as an intelligence officer, working the Phoenix beat on the Gang Squad. He developed a school crime prevention/safety program known as "Officer Friendly Program" (which Sears Roebuck Foundation has since promoted nationally). Jack was busy indeed, trying to reshape the sagging public opinion of law enforcement officers. He was honored by the community and the Department with numerous merit awards, including "Officer of the Year" ... twice!

Then, in 1985, Jack was injured trying to arrest a violent suspect and had to take a medical leave to recover. Chief Ortega then ordered Jack "back on the streets," despite the City Doctor's requirement of "desk duty only." This resulted in the reinjury of Jack's body (which was still healing)—and his second firing—this time for "a poor work record."

Stunned, McLamb once again held the Department's feet to the fire by requesting a second hearing by the City Service Board. Once again, they voted unanimously to "put Jack back to work!" AND charged the Phoenix Police Department, and Ortega, with "having a vendetta" against officer McLamb for his publications. Imagine, the most decorated officer in Phoenix's history, facing a vendetta from his boss for standing up for your rights! Finally, in 1986, after another reinjury, during the arrest of a violent drug pusher caught in the commission of a felony, Jack was forced to take an early medical retirement. This time the City Doctor simply refused to allow Jack to go back to work for the Department.

Since then, medically retired from the force, Jack continues his fight for freedom, liberty and justice by speaking to Police officers and patriotic Americans around the country. As founder of The American Citizens & Lawmen Association, Jack is committed to "protecting the people from the 'System' and putting an end to Weaver Mountain and Waco-style government-planned holocausts by reminding those in uniform of their Oath of Office—to uphold the constitution." Jack requests your prayers in this monumental effort. He has recently published an exposé entitled, Vampire Killer 2000—A Police Action Plan for Stopping World Government Rule.
