

Before They Went Out To Meet God.

I was raised in an upper-middle class family that regularly attended church. By the time I was in my mid-teens, I was groping for a direction in my life. I went to Europe with some friends, hoping to find something. I got deep into drugs and alcohol. Without any answers to my questions, I returned home. I then enrolled in a university, but found only more questions and still no answers.

At this time, my brother got saved at the Tony and Susan Alamo Christian Foundation Church and Seminary. It is God's promise to those that keep His commandments that He will save their families (their house) (Acts 16:31). For the next ten months, my brother communicated to me by letter about the Lord and the decision I had to make. In September of 1971, I arrived at the Tony and Susan Alamo Foundation Church and Seminary to see my brother. I got saved because I had encountered something I
