

THE ECONOMY AND THE DRIVE TOWARD WAR

Anatomy of the Economic Crisis by Sam Marcy

Banks and corporations fold. Plants shut down. Millions are laid off as industrial areas turn to wastelands. All over the capitalist world, a crisis is deepening that threatens to lead to war. What are the specific features of this crisis that make it different from earlier recessions and depressions? How has the growth of monopoly stifled the process of capitalist development? How can workers respond to the anti-labor offensive? Marcy takes up a range of topics from the speculative "tulip mania" of the 17th century to bank failures today; from the success of Ford's Model A to the failure of Freddy Laker's try at mass-production air travel; from the 1930s glory days of the UAW to its present retreat under the sledgehammer of capitalist contraction.

Reindustrialization: The Menace Behind the Promise by Sam Marcy

"Reindustrialization"—the plan to decentralize and automate U.S. industry, and shift it to the anti-union Sun Belt states. Marcy looks behind the hollow promises to the severe impact this plan is already having on the working class. He examines three main aspects of the economic crisis and raises a concrete proposal for fighting the effects of "reindustrialization."
