

had the girl. The daughter began screaming, as though she had memorized the words, "I don't want to go home with her. I don't want to live with her."

It was obvious she had been coached. Later, she admitted the police had found her at the rectory where she had been attending school for the past six months. While at the precinct, the police lieutenant approached the girl and whispered something into her ear. She immediately quieted down and agreed to return home. Obviously torn between two emotions, one, the abracadabra of the Roman Church and the other, the natural love for her mother, the girl was repentant for a short while. But once again, the old bitterness arose and this time, the child demanded that the mother attend the Roman Catholic Church.

Then, one day the girl returned home and said the nuns wanted her baptized. When the mother refused to hear of it, the girl threatened to strike her and said the "doorman would burn your body and the Roman Catholic Church would see to it that I do not go to jail." The child, under the constant emotional pressure had become irrational!

In one of her many attempts to win her daughter's love back, the mother suggested an outing to Coney Island. She was shocked to hear her daughter say that she never wanted to go there because "it is full of Jews."

Where she got this prejudiced idea, the mother did not know but suspected it had come from her new associates. Later, the girl told one of her mother's close friends that "Jesus Christ rang a bell each time he passed a Jew." (!) This despite the fact that since her early years, the mother had taught her to be tolerant and had stressed the humility and love of Jesus.

It happened again. The girl disappeared for three days and three nights. The mother, under this continued terror, broke down physically. Everything seemed hopeless. Finally, a police officer came and wanted her to go to the Police Precinct. She refused. Twenty minutes later, a detective appeared at the door with the girl,

(Article continues following four pages of prayer and pictures.)

"OUR PRAYER"

Heavenly Father, we come to Thee in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ, thanking Thee for Thy manifold blessings and for the Leadership and Guidance of the Holy Spirit in the work of The American Protestant Defense League since its inception more than twenty years ago.

May the Miracles of Thy Grace described in this booklet, encourage and bless everyone who reads it and as a result, may many more prayer workers be raised up to pray for all the departments of our work and for even greater victories in the future.

We thank Thee for the prayer-believing Christians who have so steadfastly stormed the Throne of Grace for this work and its workers and we pray that many more believers be lead to re-dedicate themselves to Christ and His Cause and that many more precious souls be brought out of nature's darkness into the Light and Liberty of the Son of God.

All this we ask in the Name of Christ our Lord and Master. Amen.
