

*A*frica. The only place on earth where the elephant, giraffe, lion, rhino, gorilla and cheetah roam free. But the wild animals of Africa—and the sun-washed savannahs and mountain forests they inhabit—are in jeopardy.

The African Wildlife Foundation, founded in 1961, works with the people of Africa to protect their cherished natural resources for coming generations.

With the majority of its staff based in Africa, AWF works at the grass roots, helping park managers and communities safeguard wildlife and wilderness areas. We assist African nations in designing long-term strategies to protect their unmatched natural resources from depletion. And through public education, we alert people the world over to the urgency of saving Africa's treasures.

AWF activities are designed to respond to an evolving Africa, a continent now grappling with the social, economic and environmental consequences of stunning growth in population and rising
