Structure and Function are Not the Same: The Case for Restoring Mechanoreceptor Continuity Following Anterior Cruciate Ligament Injury

Jillian E. Beveridge, PhD; Payam Zandiyeh, PhD; Brett D. Owens, MD; Ata M. Kiapour, PhD; Braden C. Fleming, PhD

References (continued)

48. Beveridge JE, Heard BJ, Shrive NG and Frank CB. Tibiofemoral centroid velocity correlates more consistently with models of stifle injury cartilage damage than does contact path length in two ovine models of stifle injury. 2013 November 31(11):1745-56. PMID: 25042631

52. Hasani S, Feller JA and Webster KE. Familial Predisposition to Anterior Cruciate Ligament Injury: A Systematic Review with Meta-analysis. 2022 Nov 52(11):2657-2668. PMID: 35829993

71. Donnenfield JI, Karamchedu NP, Fleming BC, Molino J, Proffen BL and Murray MM. Articular cartilage and synovium may be important sources of post-surgical synovial fluid inflammatory mediators. 2022 14(3):1640-1651. PMID: 35429522

73. Donnenfield JI, Fleming BC, Proffen BL, Podury A and Murray MM. Microscopic and transcriptomic changes in porcine synovium one year following disruption of the anterior cruciate ligament. 2023 Dec 31(12):1554-1566. PMID: 37742942

74. Donnenfield JI, Proffen BL, Fleming BC and Murray MM. Responding to ACL Injury and its Treatments: Comparative Gene Expression between Articular Cartilage and Synovium. 2023 Apr 26 10(5)PMID: 37237597